Spy gets deal

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — John Anthony Walker Jr., the sailor son he recruited into spying for the Soviet Union pleaded guilty to espionage charges Monday in an arrangement that will mean the father must serve at least 10 years of a life prison sentence and his son more than eight years.

For the deal to stand, John Walker must cooperate fully with the government in future proceedings, including the espionage trial of his Navy buddy Jerry Whitworth. That trial is scheduled Jan. 19 in San Francisco.

"The reason we entered into this agreement is because John Walker has something of vital interest to this country," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Schatzow. "We need to know what has been broken and what needs to be fixed."

The principal beneficiary of the Michael Walker, center, pleads guilty as his father, right, and attorney Holander list an arrangement is the 22-year-old Michael, who was subject to two life terms plus 30 years if he had been convicted in a later trial. "The only thing we had to offer Mr. Walker would be some concession for his son," Schatzow said. "The trial of the older Walker had been scheduled for Monday, but the plea session was held instead. The agreement specified that the sentences, to be imposed later by U.S. District Judge Alexander Harvey II, will be two life terms plus 10 years for John Walker and two 25-year terms plus three 10-year terms for Michael. The sentences will be served concurrently, making John Walker eligible for parole in 10 years and his son after eight years and four months. Harvey said he doesn't usually

Hurricane batters coast of Louisiana

By GUY COATES
The Associated Press

NEW IBERIA, La. — Hurricane Juan, a surprising late-season storm, sank an off-shore oil platform and thrashed others with 45-mph wind and waves up to 20 feet Monday.

The storm also forced the rescue of 146 people at sea as caskets floated from mausoleums and bobbed along on floodwaters ashore.

Juan left at least three dead and four missing and stranded hundreds of people on land, as thousands were told to evacuate.

Because the storm came so late in the season, many people paid little attention to warnings until Juan reached hurricane strength Sunday afternoon—and by then three days of rain and high tides had already flooded some homes and roads.

Tides were reported 5 to 8 feet above normal along the coast. Gov. Edwin Edwards declared 13 parishes in a state of emergency, saying the heavy rains and tidal flooding badly damaged the state's soybean and sugarcane crops.

Storm-driven water breached a canal levee near the town of Galliano, prompting Lafourche Parish President Chas Tardo to advise about 5,000 people to leave their homes.

"The force of the water coming through is widening the break," said Tardo, adding that he might have to order evacuation if flooding got worse.

Water poured over levees in other parts of southeast Louisiana. In the town of Lafitte, it turned streets into lakes and spilled over a graveyard. When the mausoleums filled with water, sealed caskets popped them open and bobbed out into the floodwaters.

Tornadoes which spun off the hur-ricane's outlying storms struck Florida's Panhandle, damaging at least 20 homes and businesses and sending two people to hospitals, while heavy rain prompted flash flood watches in parts of Texas and Mississippi.

As the storm edged westward along the coast and then stalled, sunshine appeared through partly cloudy skies over New Orleans around noon Monday.

The Coast Guard reported Monday that it and other agencies had rescued 146 people since Sunday afternoon. Petty Officer Debbie Westerberg said the operations, suspended by nightfall, would resume at dawn.

Those rescued included 79 of the 90 workers who were forced to go overboard in "unsinkable" escape capsules. Several 30-foot lifeboats, when one oil rig lost its moorings and smashed into another 35 miles south of Levee, said Coast Guard spokesman Keith Spangler. The remaining man died, and several of the survivors, taken off the rig in a massive morning-long helicopter airlift, suffered broken bones and other injuries.

"There are people in the life capsules, there are people hanging onto the sides of the life capsules, there are people floating in the water," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Thomas Peck in New Orleans. "Most of them are cold and scared but they're glad to be on shore."

Acadian paramedic Andy Bruch said, "We saw a wall of water come through here... that must have been at least 45 feet. It did a little damage to one of our platforms," said Frankie Husser, a worker contacted by telephone on an oil rig about 30 miles out about the time the eye of the storm came near.

Idaho, Chinese province now 'sisters'

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Language was a barrier, but the spirit of cooperation was clear as Gov. John Evans signed a sister state agreement with a province of the People's Republic of China.

Evans on Monday called it a "historic occasion" as he signed two leather-bound agreements declaring Idaho a sister state with the Chinese province of Shanxi. The agreements will open the way for cultural, sports and educational exchanges, the governor said. Signing for the visitors was Bai Qingcai, vice governor of the province, who noted that the sister state pact is the latest step in cultural exchanges that started in 1979.

Through an interpreter Bai praised what he called a "friendship province relationship" with Idaho that he said will "mark the beginning of a new state of relations" between China and the United States.

The visitors, who were to be honored at a state dinner here Monday night, have been in the state since last week.

David Porter, director of the Department of Commerce, said the Chinese visitors were particularly interested in the Magic Valley's farms and irrigation systems and went through a potato processing plant at Rupert.

The potato harvest is in full swing in southern Idaho, and Porter said the Chinese observed how it is done in Idaho. Potatoes also are an important crop in the province, he said.

After Monday's ceremonies, the Chinese are scheduled to travel to Moscow for an inspection trip to the University of Idaho's farm research facilities.

Porter said the friendship delegation isn't particularly aimed at trade opportunities, although that might result. He said the Chinese visitors expressed an interest in consumer items, farm research, management and the use of computers to aid farmers and teacher education programs such as the one at Boise State University.

Almost no growth seen for Twin Falls

By ANNETTE CARV
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls faces almost no growth in the next 25 years and a struggle to maintain existing city services, a J-U-B Engineers representative told the City Council at a Monday work session.

The company released the first draft of a report on long-range plans for the city Monday, to begin wrapping up a $27,000 project requested by the council.

The population of Twin Falls is not likely to increase by more than 6,000 or 7,000 people in the next 25 years, said Wayne Forrey of J-U-B Engineers, based on data from Woods and Poole Economics Inc. and the National Planning Association.

The growth rate in the next five years may be as high as 2 percent, Forrey said. Some of the population increase may come as bankrupt farm families leave small farms around the valley and move to Twin Falls to try to find work, he said.

However, from 1990 to 2010, the growth rate should drop to only .7 percent.

The majority of Twin Falls residents responding to a city survey favored a 2 percent growth rate for the city, but that increase now looks unrealistic, Forrey said. Between 1970 and 1980, the city grew at a rate of 2 percent, slowing to 1.2 percent between 1980 and 1982, Forrey said.

During the last decade, the rate of employment has increased at the rate of 2.5 percent, but that growth is also a part of the past, Forrey said.

"If unemployment feels bad now, wait," Forrey said. "It's projected to get worse in the next years."

Based on projections from the National Planning Association, he predicts that employment will grow about .8 percent during the next decade and only .5 percent annually after 1995.

Stagnant growth projections are clearly tied to agriculture problems, Forrey said. More than 30 percent of the state's agricultural employment comes from the Magic Valley, with most local food processing occurs in Twin Falls, he said.

Many economists believe that Idaho's dependence upon an economy based on natural resources will hamper diversification to other industries, he said.

He quoted them as saying that Idaho's conservative taxation stand

Guru faces federal immigration counts

By TOM MINEHART
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, arrested Monday as authorities said he was trying to flee the country, was charged in a federal indictment unsealed in Oregon with covering up "sham marriages" to keep illegal aliens in the country.

In West Germany, meanwhile, three of the guru's one-time followers were arrested on an Oregon indictment charging them with attempted murder.

The guru and eight followers were arrested after they landed early Monday morning aboard two Learjets, which had flown from the Rajneeshpuram, Ore., commune to Charlotte, said U.S. Marshal Ray Abrams.

Rajneesh, 53, is the spiritual leader of a sect that claims up to 500,000 adherents, mainly in the United States, Western Europe and Australia. About 3,000 followers live at Rajneeshpuram.

The 35-count federal indictment unsealed in Portland, Ore., charges Rajneesh and seven disciples with conspiring to defraud the United States, and with ordering others to make false statements to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in a cover-up of "sham marriages" between U.S. and foreign disciples.

Among those indicted was Ma Anand Sheela, the guru's former personal secretary who abruptly left the commune for Europe in mid-September.

Sheela, Ma Shanti Bhadra, and Ma Anand Puja, were arrested in West Germany on Monday in a separate Oregon indictment on charges of attempted murder, conspiracy to commit murder and first-degree assault, said Oregon Attorney General Dave Frohnmayer.

Rajneesh had claimed that Sheela and her lieutenants had plotted to poison the water supply of a nearby community and had poisoned the Jefferson County district attorney.

"He is the one that blew the whistle about alleged criminal wrongdoing by his own followers," Frohnmayer said, "so he is an important part of the ongoing criminal investigation."

Gem lawyers claim insurance losses behind cancellations

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A task force of the Idaho Trial-Lawyers Association will attempt to make a case against insurance companies increasing premiums or canceling policies on cities and counties and blaming it on an escalating number of lawsuits.

The insurance companies' reasoning is subterfuge for the real reason they are raising prices — losses on their investments, says Ken Pedersen, a Twin Falls lawyer who chairs the association task force.

"There is no hard evidence to prove that of lawsuits and amount of damages awarded the insurance industry is facing a solvency in the cases."

Lawyers, both in Idaho and nationwide, aren't buying that reasoning. The Idaho Trial-Lawyers Association reacted by forming the task force, which includes lawyers from the state.

"The (insurance) industry's own statistics clearly indicate premium increases are directly tied to investment losses rather than to increased risks and claims," Pedersen said.

Companies aren't going to admit they made poor investments, he added. "They are going to say, 'We're getting sued too often.' The attorneys group intends to take a closer look at the profits of insurance companies, and will propose rectifying legislation, possibly to force disclosure of specific financial information."

"I think we need to know more about insurance company profits and how they make their money before they cry wolf, before they say they are losing money," Pedersen said.

Self-insurance pools, which some of the cities are considering and using, are a better regulation of insurance companies are possible solutions, he added. Pedersen admitted that lawyers have a financial stake in the outcome of their new cause because they are advocates of plaintiffs and defendants. But, who else will speak for the victims of malpractice or negligence, Pedersen asked.

"Where is their lobby? They certainly don't gather together in their wheelchairs," Pedersen said. "We are representing a minority that has little power. Those victims aren't going to disappear."

Soviet sailor taken off vessel

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — A Soviet sailor who was forced back to his ship twice after he apparently tried to defect was taken off the vessel Monday to be interviewed by U.S. authorities trying to find out if he wants to stay in the United States.

The seaman, Miroslav Medvid, was taken to the Coast Guard cutter Salva, where a State Department official who speaks Russian and other U.S. representatives began interviewing him. State Department spokesman Peter Martinez said.

"Soviet representatives also are on the ship," he said. "They had agreed earlier in the day to his procedure."

State Department spokesman Anita Stockman said late Monday she had no further information about the sailor or the results of the questioning.

Surgeons transplant 2 hearts

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Doctors Monday transplanted a human heart into a man who lived 11 days with the Penn State artificial heart, hours after surgeons in Pittsburgh performed the same operation for a man kept alive for four days by a Jarvik-7 pump.

Anthony Mandia, 44, the first recipient of the Penn State heart, was taken off a heart-lung machine and began relying on the female donor heart less than three hours into the 4½-hour surgery. Earlier, doctors rejected using another donor heart for him.

That heart, considered too big for Mandia, instead went to Thomas J. Galdosh, 47, a factory worker who lived four days with the Jarvik-7 artificial heart in Pittsburgh.

In San Francisco, meanwhile, Richard E. Dailara resumed eating solid food Monday and joked with his family as twin mechanical pumps circulated blood through his body. The Thoratec pumps do not require removal of his natural heart.

Shevardnadze, Cubans confer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze started top-level meetings Monday in Havana with Cuban officials, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina reported.

The dispatch, received here, said Shevardnadze arrived Sunday at the Havana airport after attending U.N. 40th anniversary ceremonies in New York. It said he was greeted at the airport by Cuban President Fidel Castro and attended a reception Sunday night given by Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca.

Sakharov's wife may head west

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Soviet authorities have told Yelena Bonner, wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, that she can leave for the West immediately to get medical treatment, a West German newspaper reported Monday.

The mass-circulation daily Bild, quoting "reliable sources" in Moscow, said Mrs. Bonner, 64, was told by Soviet police a few days ago she could "fly immediately to wherever she wants."

Afternoon temperatures were much cooler with most highs in the 50s. The warmest afternoon temperature was 58 at Malad.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho Thursday through Saturday calls for dry conditions with a warming trend. High temperatures Thursday 55 to 65, warming into the 60s Saturday. Overnight lows mostly in the 30s west and 25 to 35 east.

The highest temperature in the state Monday was 69 degrees in Malad, while Elk City recorded the low of 27 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation: a high of 36 degrees was reported at Casa Grande, Ariz., and a low of 18 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

Humphrey turns back upstream

PITTSBURG, Calif. (AP) — Humphrey, the recalcitrant humpback whale, headed back upstream Monday, and frustrated biologists decided to let him wander freely in the Sacramento River for awhile, instead of trying to force him back to the salty ocean.

"We will absolutely leave him alone. There is no point to more stress," said Sheridan Stone, a biologist for the National Marine Fisheries Service, the federal agency responsible for endangered sea animals.

The scientists planned to try Monday to tag the 45-ton whale with a sophisticated radio transmitter capable of tracking his movements by satellite.

The whale, first sighted in San Francisco Bay on Oct. 11, had been herded 14 miles downstream in the Sacramento River on Sunday by a flotilla of 18 boats bunting on six-foot metal poles suspended into the water to near Pittsburg, 35 miles from his Pacific Ocean home.

Jurors listen to transcripts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the spy trial of fired FBI agent Richard W. Miller on Monday listened to a court stenographer read testimony from a juror's agent, then recessed without a verdict in the seventh day of deliberations.

Jurors heard the words of John Hunt, who tried to get Svetlana Ogorodnikov to be an FBI informant before she met Miller and became his lover.

Miller, 48, the FBI agent ever charged with espionage, faces life in prison if convicted of all seven counts of his espionage indictment.

The jury has been listening instead of talking since last Thursday when court stenographer Kathleen Earlly began reading testimony from the trial's early days.

Opposition leader in custody

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Security agents operating under Nicaragua's state of emergency raided a political leader's home, seized personal documents and took him away, a spokesman for the main political opposition said Monday.

He said Enrique Maneses, a leader of the Liberal Constitutional Party, had not been heard from since seven heavily armed agents of the leftist Sandinista government seized him before dawn Saturday.

Document expert passes test

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An expert on rare Mormon Church documents said Monday he took and passed a lie-detector test to back up his claim that he had nothing to do with twin fatal bombings here Oct. 24.

Brent Melcarfe said he took the test last week, about a week after separate explosions killed Salt Lake City stockbroker Steven Christensen and the wife of a former business associate of Christensen's, Kathy Sheets.

In addition, an attorney for the only man to be charged by investigators in the case said his client was undergoing submitting to a polygraph examination as well.

Ag export efforts cited

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) —

A U.S. Department of Agriculture official on Monday assured secretaries of agriculture from 49 states and the Virgin Islands that the Reagan administration is working to increase farm exports.

In an address before the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture, Deputy Undersecretary Thomas Kay outlined government efforts that he said "can make agricultural exports boom."

The efforts include convincing foreign customers that the United States will not embargo food exports again, negotiating with other food producers to end foreign export subsidies, and developing new markets for American-grown products, Kay said.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, himself a former state agriculture secretary in Illinois, also attended the conference and told reporters this year's farm bill is "at risk" for a presidential veto because of its price tag.

"This thing is getting away from us," Block said at a news conference.

The congressional budget resolution assigned the U.S. to the three-year farm bill, but the version passed by the House has been estimated to cost $48 billion while the Senate is now debating a $55 billion measure.

allow prosecutors and the defense to work out sentences, but there are exceptional circumstances in the Walker cases. "The most significant aspect is the full and frank consideration John Walker has agreed to give the government. The information he has furnished should be of great, incalculable value to the government. If he doesn't fulfill his commitments, the agreements can be broken," Harvey said.

In San Francisco, Whitworth's attorney, Tony Tamburello, contended prosecutors "offer" the arrangement to Walker because they can't build a solid case against Whitworth, and called the arrangement "highly unusual and a perversion of our system of justice."

"It's quite obvious that Mr. Walker can cut himself a sweet deal with the government," Tamburello said. "He has a strong incentive to stick to his end of the bargain, which is to help the government get a conviction of Mr. Whitworth."

Neither Walker nor his son spoke at the three-hour session except to answer the judge's questions on whether they understood their pleas and the sentences that would be imposed.

The bearded Walker had his eyes closed frequently and appeared at times to be asleep.

"We're profitable, but not enough so we can swing the prices," Cassinelli added that he wasn't an "apologist for insurance companies." The problem is genuine, but he emphasizes that it's broader based than the lawyers charge. He is concerned because their efforts to impose stricter regulations could discourage companies from doing business in Idaho, which would make it harder than ever to find companies to provide coverage.

"It will be the old game of winning the battle and losing the war. They (insurance companies) are independent institutions, whatever anybody thinks of them," Cassinelli said.

"We are a minor part of the insurance industry," he said.

Truth in billing law proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader urged the public Monday to join a new crusade against billing errors, abuse and fraud, which he said cost Americans billions of dollars annually.

Nader advised consumers to scrutinize bills for errors, resist complex language and wrongful charges, and send him copies of erroneous bills they receive.

"Computerized bills provide an aura of respectability and accuracy to mistakes and fraud," Nader told a news conference.

Reagan pushes budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying "dithering-and-delay" on Capitol Hill is threatening government finances, President Reagan on Monday pressed Congress to quickly pass legislation increasing the government's borrowing authority along with a balanced-budget plan the Senate has attached.

"Congress must not fail the people on this," the president said.

However, House Democrats among those negotiating a compromise version of the proposal for statutory ceilings on budget deficits in order to force a balanced budget by 1991 said Congress should not be stampeded into blindly accepting an untested plan.

While Reagan prodded Congress publicly, administration officials studied plans to make the point more dramatically through temporarily halting spending on some federal programs until legislators resolve their dispute.

Shuttle launch count starts

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began Monday for Wednesday's launch of space shuttle Challenger on an international science mission with a record eight astronauts.

"We're still trying to figure out if we're a gaggle or a flock or a herd," said Bonnie Dunbar, the lone woman on a crew that includes five Americans, two West Germans and a Dutchman.

Challenger, making its ninth space trip, is to lift off at 10 a.m. MST Wednesday on a week-long flight on which the astronauts will conduct 80 experiments in the pressurized Spacelab workshop in the shuttle's 60-foot-long cargo bay.

AIDS may produce dismissal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, in a significant reversal, said Monday it had not ruled out the dismissal of servicemen who acknowledge drug use or homosexual activity in the course of screening for exposure to AIDS.

Such individuals can, in fact, incriminate themselves during medical interviews by physicians, a top legal official said late Monday.

Individuals who inform doctors during medical screening that they have been abusing drugs or engaging in homosexual activity can be discharged even if they don't show evidence of the disease, but they must be given an honorable discharge, added Bob Gilliat, the Pentagon's assistant general counsel for manpower and health affairs.

Brady's wife testifies on gun control bill

NEW YORK (AP) — The wife of White House press secretary James Brady testified Monday that a cooling-off period before a dealer can sell a gun might have prevented John Hinckley Jr. from shooting her husband and President Reagan in March 1981.

"There have been many times that I have found myself thinking, 'Why is it possible for the John Hinckleys of this world to walk into a store, buy a handgun and go out and shoot people because they hear voices or have strange visions?'" Sarah Brady testified before the House Judiciary Committee.

"Had a waiting period and background check for handgun purchasers been in effect, John Hinckley could have been stopped," said Mrs. Brady.

She was among crime victims, law enforcement officials, religious leaders and a pediatrician who testified against the McClure-Volkmer bill, saying it would weaken the 1968 Gun Control Act.

The bill, which already has passed the Senate, is backed by pro-gun groups who say the 1968 act has failed to reduce violent crime, and that its provisions are onerous and in some cases unconstitutional.

One backer of the bill, Lawrence D. Pratt, executive director of Gun Owners of America said, "criminals pay no attention to the legal purchase requirements."

At the Manhattan hearing, Ron Biellek, who was left a paraplegic by a shooting and is director of Massachusetts Citizens for Handgun Control, said the legislation would make it "very easy to buy and transport handguns."

Biellek was gunned down in a robbery attempt in 1983 by a man who had been jailed twice for carrying unlicensed and stolen handguns.

New York City Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward testified that, "in an age in which most homicides of police officers are committed with handguns and approximately 9,000 homicides annually are committed by guns in this nation, we should be working to eliminate guns from our society."

DeLorean 'stable'

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Former automaker John Z. DeLorean was hospitalized for an irregular heartbeat Monday after complaining of dizziness and palpitations while preparing for a court appearance in his bitter divorce trial.

DeLorean was listed in stable condition in the coronary care unit at Somerset Medical Center after driving himself to the hospital and walking into the emergency room, said hospital spokeswoman Joanne Thorsen.

Lawmakers living in dark over DST

Magic Valley residents have survived another of those twice-a-year adjustments of the clock — in this instance returning to standard time after six months on daylight saving time.

But in the twilight of that period in 1985 when Idaho and most of the nation were on DST came word that Congress is once again considering legislation extending daylight saving time. The current proposal would — if approved — have Americans set their clocks ahead an hour on the first Sunday in April and set them back the first Sunday in November.

This legislation would continue to allow states to exempt all or parts of themselves from daylight saving time. Currently, Hawaii, Arizona and portions of Indiana remain on standard time throughout the year.

If you noticed such matters in the past week when Idaho was still operating on DST, the sun was rising well after 8 a.m. Another week on that system would bring sunrise close to 8:30 a.m. And on a cloudy morning it might not be good and light until well after 9 a.m.

What at least two Idahoans — Rep. Larry Craig and Rep. Richard Stallings — think about the latest proposal to tinker with the nation's time system is clear. When the matter came up for a vote in the House this past week, both voted against it.

But since the measure passed the House, it is now before the Senate. That means we haven't heard the last of it.

What is most disturbing about the entire matter is that it would seem Congress could find better use of its own time than persisting in tinkering with the nation's clocks. The current system, while not universally popular, has worked reasonably well for nigh on 20 years.

One matter of considerably more importance is dealing with the national deficit, which continues to grow by the hour while Congress frets over when or if the nation's clocks should be adjusted twice yearly.

GOP created mess

"Ho,ray," Sen. Symms, the Republicans have reached a triumph and goal, the biggest annual federal deficit in history. The U.S. federal budget deficit reached 212 billion dollars this week.

1985 has been a great Republican economic year. For the first time in 30 years the U.S. became a debtor nation; the Republicans, in five years, have doubled the federal debt. It is now $2 trillion. Our overseas markets are lost. The overseas trade deficit will exceed $150 billion this year alone. Our wheat sits in surplus.

Sen. Symms and Rep. Craig don't seem to brag about Reaganomics any more. We now know that Republican economies only means that very few of the rich get lots richer and the farmer, lumberjacks and miners go broke and with them Idaho.

The Democratic State Fairness Committee suggests to the Republicans that they sponsor a special day to remember their Republican triumphs. The Democrats doubt that the Republican economies day should be designated as a holiday for celebration. It should, instead, be a day for Sen. Symms and Rep. Craig to be brave and take their responsibility for voting the appropriations that created this mess.

Jedi master returns

President Reagan's talk to the United Nations, with its heavy emphasis on his Star Wars proposal, may have drawn applause from friends but it didn't impress one guest. For shortly after listening to the tiresome quibbling of United States and Soviet "peace diplomats," Yoda, the great Jedi master, made an unexpected reappearance.

"Mr. Reagan and Mr. Shevardnadze, please try to break the chains of your earth-bound ideologies. Learn to think like a Jedi, like a citizen of the galaxy. You political leaders, along with your military leaders, have been virtually unanimous in public assertions that you must go ahead and pay ably in the armament race — and yes, Mr. Reagan, your so-called Star Wars proposal fits into this line of thinking; but you have been equally unanimous in saying nothing about what happens then. Suppose you achieve a state of ideal mutual deterrence. What then? Surely no sane person can envisage your planet spinning on into eternity, divided into armed camps poised to destroy each other, and call it peace and security. My point is, gentlemen, that the policy of mutual deterrence includes no provisions for its own resolution.

"Oh, Mr. Reagan, I'm especially disappointed in your lukewarm support of the United Nations, no matter how immature it is at this time. Reflect on the history of your own nation and you shall find the real solution to the arms race. Today's world faces problems similar to those of the 13 colonies after the revolution. All the colonies were in jeopardy, yet because of self-interest and suspicion — each jealously guarding its own government, its own army, its own laws — they could not form an effective bond of unity. Only when they sacrificed some rights to a central authority could their true needs be met, leading to a new constitution and the formation of your great nation.

"The unification of the colonies resulted in a new civilization greater than any they could have developed separately. Isolated nations must now take similar steps toward 'world solidarity' — the highest stage of development for your planet.

"Mr. President, the American people have achieved a working model for a true federation of nations. They must now regain the vision of their great destiny and take the lead in guiding all humanity toward global unification. Truly, I tell you, the American nation is equipped and empowered to accomplish that which will adorn the pages of history and be blessed in both the East and the West for the triumph of all humankind. You must arise to this great task and win the victory!"

U.S. misses chance to save Philippines

Suddenly and with greater urgency than that provoked by the destruction of millions following the assassination of Benigno Aquino Jr. two years ago, the Reagan administration is openly questioning the ability of its long-trusted, anti-Communist ally Ferdinand Marcos to hold on to his rule of the Philippines.

Fred Poole, Max Vanzi

The moves are coming fast. President Reagan dispatched his friend, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., to the Philippines to lecture President Marcos on his excesses. At the same time, Assistant Secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz warns that the guerrillas of the Communist New Peoples Army could match government forces in military capability in three to five years. Another administration official says that the CIA considers the Philippines to be "this administration's Iran."

At the Pentagon, Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard L. Armitage says "we are looking for alternatives" outside the Philippines as places to move Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base, the United States' largest overseas military installations.

The administration's new candor in openly identifying the Philippines as a danger zone is a refreshing change. The trouble is, the candor has come too late. If there was ever a time for moderate, American-sponsored reform, that time seems to have passed.

In the area of human rights alone, the abuses have gone on for too long, with the Reagan government having played a special role. It is this administration that, in the eyes of Filipinos, signaled to Marcos that the United States would no longer question Marcos's use of violence to propagate his rule. It is a situation that the Filipino left — anti-American to begin with — views with glee. And even moderate Filipino opposition figures now tend to blame Washington for the sorry state of their country.

Before Marcos staged his 1972 internal coup that dismantled Asia's oldest democracy, the Philippines led all other countries in Southeast Asia by most social and economic indicators. But after years of methodical government looting and terror, the Philippines is now routinely compared, in terms of poverty and malnutrition, to Bangladesh.

Reagan officials now talk, as Laxalt reportedly did to Marcos, of the need for military, political and economic reform.

Moreover, Marcos is being asked to clean up — his act by the same administration that remained silent when an ominous shift took place in the nature of Philippine government violence. The new Reagan Administration said nothing of this increased bloodiness, unlike the Carter Administration before it that had often questioned Marcos sharply over people victimized by martial law excesses.

Now America urges reform and new elections. It does so at a time when the above-ground opposition has been too fragmented to rally around a party or candidate.

The clearer message coming out of Washington is, in any event, not that the administration is suddenly horrified by what its ally Marcos has done to his people, but rather that America fears Marcos no longer has the capacity to fight the rebels that threaten its interests, chief among them the maintenance of the two huge American bases.

What the administration intends to do about it — press on for reforms, work for Marcos's ouster or just distance itself from an increasingly unpopular figure — is not clear.

But a better gauge to administration intentions than the present expressions of worry is not far away. U.S. aid to the Philippines, military and otherwise, is up for discussion before Congress beginning in late January. The last time around, the administration asked for $100 million in military aid for Marcos, a 160 percent increase over the amount granted the year before.

Fred Poole and Max Vanzi are the authors of "Revolution in the Philippines: The United States in a Hall of Cracked Mirrors."

Alcoholics need understanding

I am writing to you in response to all the articles you have published concerning my name, Richard Lee.

"It seems to me that an old saying is very true in this case, 'So many people look, but they never see; so many people hear, but they never listen.'"

When someone hears that someone has cancer or heart disease, people reach out to them with support and prayers. When people hear that someone is an alcoholic, they pull away and condemn.

Cancer and heart disease are the number one and two killers of American people today. Alcohol is number three, but when you take traffic deaths, as in my case, alcoholism becomes the number one killer of American people today.

Alcoholism is a disease that is incurable, but with treatment it can be overcome so that a person, male or female, can live a fulfilling and productive life. If people would look toward alcoholism in the same respect as they do cancer and heart disease, maybe people wouldn't condemn, maybe people would understand and reach out with that support which the alcoholic wants so desperately.

I am an alcoholic. I am powerless over alcohol and my life has become unmanageable. Through the Port of Hope and AA meetings, I have met people with the very same disease I have, alcoholism. Through these people I have come to believe that I can and will beat this disease. I can never cure it, but I can beat it, one day at a time.

To my wife, friends, and people I have met through Port of Hope and AA, I say this, I will beat this, one day at a time. Some day I will be living proof that an alcoholic can live a fulfilling and productive life. It will happen whether it be 10 years from now, or the state wishes, or in the near future. I will live with this disease for the rest of my life, but I will survive just by knowing that I don't have to drink today. I will survive. RICHARD LEE Hansen

Robbins should do homework

I would like to comment on Garry Robbins' statement that he made in The Times-News on Oct. 24, regarding Dennis Adamson.

He stated, "He is not a farmer and never has been." I think Mr. Robbins should do his homework before he makes a statement like that.

The Adamson family moved to their Jerome farm 17 years ago and I know for a fact that Dan has been working on the farm every year since. Three years ago they also went into the dairy business, in which he has had an active hand supervising and overseeing same. He doesn't milk the cows, but he makes certain that they are milked and fed and cared for.

Yes, it is true that Dan is a lawyer and a darned good one. He is a workaholic, who works 16 to 18 hours a day, 5 days a week, and who teaches a Sunday School class on Sunday.

With the education and experience Dennis Adamson has, I think that he is the most qualified of all the candidates running for U.S. Congress.

Independent business champ

Congratulations, Mayor Petersen, for help to Stuart Morrison Tire Co., a small local business, in dealing with the flexible-inflexible building code.

I experienced the inflexible two years ago when I planned a commercial building immediately south of the Perrine Coulee near Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

To secure a permit, I was required to hire an engineer to make a flood plain study. The engineer I was to hire was to contact city engineer, Gary Young, for the requirements. The engineer of my choice called me and stated I could not afford to pay for a study as outlined to him, consequently I did not invest $100,000 in the local economy.

This flood plain starts on the south edge of the Perrine Coulee and north over most of the Blue Lakes Shopping Center parking lot.

Now, if you are ready for the flexible code. Later, when the Sizzler was built, I thought I could get the same engineers that did the flood plain study for Daum Industries on the Sizzler. I could afford the cost of a study as they would already have the pertinent data. So I asked Mr. Young the name of the engineers. At first, he said he didn't remember. Later, he admitted when I didn't require the study made.

When it is big business, the code can be quite flexible. The Sizzler building and the landscaped berm are right in the middle of the flood plain and acts as a dam. Incidentally, the floor level of the Sizzler is four feet lower than the building I had planned.

Mayor Petersen did his best for me. Also, I would like to thank KMYT for their coverage.

Another case where the big business was able to secure flexibility was the re-routing of the Perrine Coulee around the property up and out of the natural drainage, a phenomenal engineering feat. Any 15-year-old farm boy would know better. And while we are discussing engineering, take a look at the three Five Points. The state did the West Five Points, a safe flow of traffic is achieved. The state had plans for the North Five Points and would pay for it. Their plans did not suit the city's, so Twin Falls taxpayers paid for the mess. The East Five Points is in the same category.

In conclusion, I support Emery Petersen for city council in the upcoming election, the champion of the independent business.

Canceling assembly unjust

We are three members of the senior class of Twin Falls High School and we are writing this letter because of the administration's actions taken against the student body during homecoming week.

We feel it was highly unjust taking away the traditional homecoming pep assembly because of a situation that involved few people and took place off school property.

Not only is it unfair punishment, but many people put in hours of hard work and preparation for such an assembly. It was a shame to see the talents of those individuals go to waste.

We also feel the parents deserve many thanks for supporting us and helping to put together the "assembly" at Sears parking lot after the parade. Anyone who attended that assembly could see the positive school spirit and team support from the students at Twin Falls High. It's just too bad it had to take place in a parking lot.

We sincerely hope that both the students and administration will learn from this situation and unite to make homecoming next year better than our last one was this year.

Inmates want plush motels

How is it that jail birds have constitutional rights when they have to go against justice every way possible?

And now they want plush motels to live in, while serving their time. I, for one, don't want to pay high taxes just for the convenience of these no gooders, by having a plush jail cell with TV. I said all the things they can have, just by leading a normal life. Most of them don't have homes or property to pay taxes on, so they don't care. All they can do is "bitch." This is just a farming community, not a bunch of millionaires. If you don't believe it, just look at all the farmers and businesses going bankrupt.

Before planning a six-million dollar jail for these people, "think first."

Working on pension is no sin

I must disagree with your stand in your editorial Friday, Oct. 25.

There is no difference in one retiring on a pension and then returning to work another job than there is to hold a political office and continue to run a business.

Both U.S. Grant and "Ike" became presidents of this country while receiving top military pensions.

If your income is from stocks and bonds, should you not be entitled to run for a political office? Think about it!

70-year-old jail inadequate

Notice to the parents and grandparents of Twin Falls County that love their children and/or grandchildren.

When I was a teenager (juvenile delinquent, if the courts so deemed me), I had the misfortune of spending some time with the Twin Falls County probation department. I also had the unpleasant experience of being confined in the "wonderful 70-year-old jail facility."

I'm here to tell you, parents and grandparents, that the facilities were not, and are not, adequate for safety, protection and/or stable-minded confinement.

As unfortunate or impossible as it may seem, your favorite child may end up in jail. As a reminder to these parents that may go through the same things my father went through, I would like you to think about, maybe your child having to stay in the "wonderful 70-year-old facility."

The next time a bond issue is proposed for a new jail, a jail that will be adequate to provide the protection your children and grandchildren deserve. The kind of protection you will demand for them.

Programs create double burden

To Candy Blevins of Eden for your excellent letter to the Opinion page, please accept my thanks. Articles such as "Food Stamps Aren't Enough," do not arouse much sympathy from the working men and women who support themselves and their families.

The bickering and complaining of the woman interviewed for this article, and the bleeding-heart liberals who back such programs, are putting a double burden on the backs of the people who are working and have a family of their own to support.

Many of us have worked at different available jobs, picking cherries in Michigan, to picking potatoes in Idaho, with sundry jobs in between. And yes, rearing a family in the meantime.

As there was no mention made of this woman's husband, I had to wonder if he were dead or alive, or if she just hadn't bothered to acquire one. Anyway, she has a family that she seems to expect other people to help support.

Half-hour session described as 'fruitful'

Hostages' kin confer with president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relatives of four of the six U.S. hostages held in Lebanon said Monday a half-hour meeting with President Reagan has bolstered their confidence that steps are being taken to obtain their loved ones' release, but that no breakthroughs appear likely soon.

"It was a very fruitful meeting, and we hope that the administration will continue to pursue their initiatives, and we intend to continue to pursue private initiatives," said Peggy Sey, sister of Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Mrs. Sey, whose brother was kidnapped on March 16, said the group was given information "that we cannot pass on."

"There are initiatives being pursued," she said. "We appreciated the fact that they've confided in us."

Paul Jacobson, the son of David Jacobson, who was abducted on May 28, said he found the meeting with Reagan "constructive."

"We do feel that the president is committed to getting these men out; that is something that he does keep track of," Jacobson said. He said the group presented a yellow ribbon to Reagan to place on a White House door as a remembrance.

"We learned a lot, and I think they accept the feelings of the families and the frustrations and the suggestions," Mrs. Sey said. "But there apparently are not any breakthroughs."

Also attending the meeting was Rose Kilburn, a niece of captive Peter Kilburn; Glen Anderson, a relative of Terry Anderson; and Sue Franceschini and Mae Mihelich, sisters of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, of Joliet, Ill., who was kidnapped Jan. 8, 1985.

Mrs. Franceschini said national security adviser Robert McFarlane described a new initiative being taken to obtain the captives' freedom. She said she could not provide details, but said: "It was an avenue that surprised us."

The White House had said relatives of four of those being held would attend the meeting. About six people were reported to be present for the two-hour visit, which included a briefing by McFarlane.

The White House did not identify those who attended.

Jacobson said McFarlane reaffirmed a commitment made several months ago "to speak directly with a representative of the group" that is believed responsible for the hostage-taking.

"If the captors are willing to come out and open up some direct lines of communication," progress could be made in gaining the hostages' release, Jacobson said.

Although Jacobson said he did not hear anything new at the session, he said he could not comment when asked if there was anything he was told not to speak to the press about.

Earlier, Reagan said at a Rose Garden ceremony that he planned to tell the group "all the things that we continue to do to try to bring about their return."

Widow asks Americans to join fight on terror

NEW YORK (AP) — Marilyn Klinghoffer on Monday recalled the terrorist nightmare on the Achille Lauro in which her husband was killed and asked citizens to "become soldiers in the battle against terrorism."

Leon Klinghoffer's death "has made a difference in the way that people now perceive their vulnerability. For the first time, we all realize that this can happen to anyone, anywhere and at any time," said Mrs. Klinghoffer, 55, at a news conference. It was her first public comment since the hijacking.

She said she was willing to go to Italy to testify against the "cold-blooded murderers, liars and cowards" who killed her husband, and would appear before a congressional subcommittee in Washington on Wednesday.

Other Americans, she said, should demand that the government support more action against terrorists, to "show the president that we want it, we need it, we must have it."

Her 69-year-old husband, restricted to a wheelchair after two strokes, was shot during the hijacking, and his body was thrown into the Mediterranean. The body later washed ashore in Syria.

Four men are being held in Italy on charges of hijacking and murder, after American military planes forced down their plane.

Mrs. Klinghoffer retold the story of the hijacking, from the moment Oct. 7 when four men carrying submachine guns burst into the ship's dining room.

She said she was convinced of the truth of reports that her husband bit the arm of one of the captors as he was being held. "He was a fighter. He would stand up for his rights," she said.

"I don't know why he was chosen, except that he was the most vulnerable person to deal with," she said.

She also confirmed earlier reports that when she identified the hijackers in Sicily, she spit at them.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Leon Klinghoffer Memorial Foundation, set up to fight terrorism, said it had received hundreds of letters from around the country.

Overtime bill passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, moving to nullify a Supreme-Court ruling, voted Monday to allow state and local governments to continue, offering time off in lieu of overtime pay.

The bill, similar to a measure approved last week by the Senate, was supported by both business and labor groups as a compromise intended to save state and local governments millions of dollars in overtime pay.

The Supreme Court ruled last February that state and local governments were required to pay overtime to all employees who work more than 40 hours a week.

The decision initially was hailed by labor unions because it would put public employees on a par with private workers under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

However, government officials began pressuring Congress for relief, saying the ruling would result in huge overtime bills and that tax increases would be needed to cover them.

The House and Senate differ on how much compensatory time employees could gather before overtime pay would be required. The Senate version would allow 480 hours while the House would limit it to 190 hours, except for police and firefighters, who could accrue 480 hours.

The House sent its version Monday to the Senate, which could accept the House changes or request a joint conference of the two chambers to reconcile differences between the bills.

Terror coverage conference sought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The president of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association called Monday for a conference by print and broadcast journalists to study coverage of terrorist acts "to avoid the excesses that marked the coverage of the TWA hijacking."

"While reasonable people differ in their degree of criticism, I don't think anyone sees coverage of the TWA hijacking as journalism's finest hour," the APME president, Michael J. Davies of The Hartford Courant, said at the group's annual convention.

Publicity about terrorist acts is the "lifeblood of terrorism," Davies said.

Alaska oil exports given OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration announced Monday it will permit limited exports of oil from Alaska's Cook Inlet, without demanding concessions from energy-hungry Japan or other prospective customers in Asia.

"This is a small step at least toward reducing our trade imbalance," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige told a news conference. He cautioned, however, that initial exports of 6,000 barrels a day would not go far in cutting the estimated $50 billion U.S. trade deficit.

The administration's decision has no effect on Alaska-North Slope oil, which remains off limits for export under national security legislation.

Israeli leader wins vote of confidence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres won a vote of confidence on his Middle East peace plan Monday night after long debate and threats by his conservative coalition partners to quit the government.

The main point of contention was the prime minister's willingness to consider an international conference as the context for direct negotiations with Jordan, which the conservative Likud has opposed consistently.

Debate in the Knesset lasted seven hours. The vote was 68-10 for Peres' plan, with 10 abstentions. The prime minister presented his peace proposals in a speech last week to the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

He indicated willingness in that speech to consider an international conference involving the Soviet Union if the Kremlin renewed diplomatic relations with Israel.

One Likud member of the Knesset, David Magen, revolted and voted against the plan. He is closely identified with Industry Minister Ariel Sharon, a leading Peres critic within the government.

Likud had threatened throughout the day to quit the government unless Peres rejected the idea of an international conference.

In an hour-long speech that ended the debate, the prime minister said: "I don't take back one word I said in the U.N. and I don't take back one word I said in the Knesset."

King Hussein of Jordan has insisted on the conference, but Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's

SHIMON PERES
Peace plan wins approval

Likud had insisted that direct talks occur without interference.

Peres indicated hope that Israel could get Jordan to break its partnership agreement with the Palestine Liberation Organization by accepting an international forum. Hussein and PLO chief Yasser Arafat agreed in February on a joint approach to peace in the Middle East.

"If there is a conference and it is acceptable to us, we will go," Peres said, but stressed that it could neither replace direct talks nor impose solutions on either side.

Latest hijacking suspect may be high PLO official

ROME (AP) — The seventh suspect arrested in the Achille Lauro hijacking may be a high-ranking PLO official who was detained originally for carrying several false passports, Italian media reported Monday.

In another development, judicial sources said Sicilian magistrates were investigating a "tense confrontation" between U.S. and Italian soldiers that occurred after U.S. Navy jets forced down an Egyptian airliner carrying the four Palestinian hijackers Oct. 11 at a NATO base in Sicily.

News agencies and state-run RAI television quoted sources they did not name in Rome and in Genoa, where the suspect is held, as saying the "PLO official" was first picked up more than a week ago outside a Rome restaurant because of the false passports.

They said he was about to be expelled for possessing false Achille Lauro case. His documents, when Rome authorities handed him over to Italian investigators in Genoa, Abbas with helping negotiate an end to the two-day hijacking.

Officials at the prosecutor's office in Genoa have said a Palestinian was arrested Saturday, but have refused to give details.

The Rome newspaper, Il Messaggero, quoted prosecutors in Genoa, home port of the hijacked cruise liner, as saying the newest suspect was an "interesting" piece in the hijack puzzle. AGI, an Italian news agency, said Monday it had learned that the suspect, whose name has not been revealed, might be a leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, a splintered faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The four Palestinian hijackers said they belonged to a PLF faction that was loyal to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

Mohammed Abbas, the leader of that faction, is sought by the United States and one group of Italian investigators on kidnapping and murder charges in the Achille Lauro case. His whereabouts are not known. The Italian government credits hijack investigators in Genoa, Abbas with helping negotiate an end to the two-day hijacking.

Report puts 1985 air deaths at 1,300

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — This year could be "the worst year of all time" for air traffic safety, the general secretary of the International Air Transport Association said Monday.

His report to the association's 41st annual meeting.

Last year, by contrast, was the best year ever for air traffic safety, Eser said in an address to more than 350 delegates from 140 airlines around the world. He did not say how many deaths occurred in 1984.

Shultz seeks talks on trade

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The United States should be ready to open talks with Canada early next year on a pact wiping out nearly all tariffs and other barriers between the world's largest trading partners, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Monday.

"The road to a bilateral trade agreement will be steep, but it is worth the climb," Shultz told a luncheon audience after four hours of discussions with Canadian Foreign Secretary Joe Clark.

"We see the prospect for substantial benefit to Canada," Shultz said. "When we realize that Canada's remaining tariffs are among the highest in industrialized countries, we see the prospects for substantially increasing U.S. exports."

The Shultz-Clark meeting was part of a series of quarterly encounters between the two men in which nearly every issue in U.S.-Canadian relations is discussed briefly.

Clark said his government was eager to begin the trade talks, but he took note of widespread anxiety in Canada.

"There remains a lively Canadian apprehension that your very size and power may engulf us," Clark said.

At a news conference, Shultz said he did not believe a protectionist mood in Congress would interfere with trade talks with Canada.

Envoy attempting to soothe relations

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A top U.S. official arrived Monday on a mission to improve relations, which have been uneasy since the Socialist government gained power four years ago and pledged to close American military bases.

Undersecretary Michael Armacost is the first ranking State Department official to visit Greece in more than three years. He told reporters at the airport that he would make "a systematic and professional review of issues of common interest" with Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu and other officials during three days in Athens.

Art thieves to get nothing — France

PARIS (AP) — Culture Minister Jack Lang said Monday that France would not yield to any extortion demand to recover nine Impressionist paintings worth $12.5 million that were stolen by gunmen from a Paris museum.

Police combed the Marmottan Museum and took testimony from guards and visitors who were forced to lie on the floor Sunday while at least five "connoisseur" thieves stole nine works of art, including Claude Monet's priceless "Impression, Sunrise."

The work, "Impression, Sunrise," inspired the name for the 19th century Impressionist movement.

The Academie des Beaux Arts, which oversees the Marmottan Museum, said none of the nine paintings, including five Monets and two Renoirs, was insured. No paintings in French museums are insured until they are loaned out to other museums, the Academie said.

Jean-Claude Vincent, head of the special-police unit charged with stolen art objects, said most museum thefts were aimed at reselling the stolen work or getting insurance money through extortion.

"There will be no question of acceding to any sort of extortion," said Lang. "I know the French police are active and remarkably organized to find the impossible to find (the culprits) and, above all, the art work."

The stolen paintings were valued at the equivalent of $12.5 million by museum curator Yves Brayer. But he said the Monet picture was priceless because of its historic value.

The bandits put the paintings into the trunk of a gray car double-parked outside the museum and drove away.

Speculation about how the thieves would cash in on the daring robbery centered on extortion, resale or a theft commissioned by a wealthy collector.

Emergency hits 100th day

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa completed its first 100 days under a state of emergency Monday, with the death rate from rioting more than double that of earlier months.

A total of 334 people have been killed in the 100 days of the emergency, a rate of 3.34 per day, according to the South African Institute of Race Relations. That compares with 509 people who died in the preceding 323 days of unrest — a rate of 1.54 per day — between Sept. 1, 1984, and the beginning of the emergency decree, the institute's records show.

Jennifer Shindler, a researcher at the institute, said Monday the figures were based on press clippings and police reports. She also said that 845 people have been killed in South Africa's racial violence since mid-1984, well above the figure of 761 disclosed early this month by President P.W. Botha.

The dead include 14 black policemen and one white soldier, as well as several black community councilors.

Nazi might be willing to give up

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Alois Brunner, one of the world's most wanted Nazi war criminals, says he is ready to surrender after living for years in Syria, a West German magazine reported Monday.

The magazine Bunte reported the 73-year-old Brunner, who was an associate of Adolf Eichmann in the Nazi SS and the deportation of Jews to death camps, said he would give himself up for trial on condition he not be sent to Israel.

"I am ready to go and respond before an international court," Bruner quoted Brunner as saying.

Hussein, Arafat meet, reassess relationship

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat met for three hours Monday to reassess their relationship and the future of their faltering joint bid to make peace with Israel.

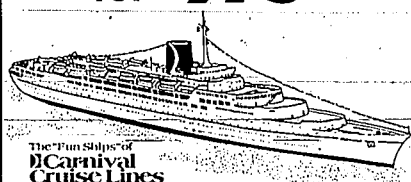

Further talks involving Arafat and Jordanian-PLO committees were scheduled for today, said Palestinian Liberation Organization spokesman Ahmed Abdel-Rahman.

Arafat told reporters he had "very good talks, successful and constructive" with Hussein, who last week told reporters he was reconsidering his relationship with the PLO chairman after a new cycle of violence and diplomatic setbacks.

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Jordanians "want a guarantee of good behavior, certificate" and

Top Gem court affirms death sentence

BOISE (AP) — Although two justices expressed reservations, the Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the conviction and death penalty ordered for Donald Kennedy Fetterly in a Canyon County robbery-slaying.

The court unanimously upheld a decision by 3rd District Judge Edward Lodge ordering Fetterly, 28, to die for the slaying of Sterling Grammer, 45, in Caldwell two years ago.

Fetterly also was ordered to serve up to five years for burglary and up to 14 years for grand theft.

In the key portion of Monday's ruling, the majority, in a decision written by Justice Robert Bakes, rejected Fetterly's argument that he was deprived of a fair trial by considerable newspaper publicity about the slaying.

Justices Robert Huntley Jr. and Stephen Bistline concurred but each said they still oppose Idaho's system of allowing a judge, not the jury, to decide whether the defendant should receive the death penalty.

Bistline also said he would have reversed the conviction because of pre-trial publicity.

"All considered, I think that a new trial should be had, which would be predicated primarily on the prosecutor's (Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris) trying of the case to the media in advance of trial," said Bistline.

"If there is a better way to prevent such future occurrences, I do not know of it," he said. Grammer was stabbed to death in Caldwell and his body was found in the Snake River on Sept. 9, 1983.

Fetterly and Karla Windsor, 29, were arrested the next day while driving Fetterly's pickup truck. In a statement, Fetterly admitted the slaying but said he could not remember the actual event.

Ms. Windsor, the only woman ever sentenced to die for a crime in Idaho, is appealing separately. The Supreme Court has not announced its decision in her case.

In his appeal, Fetterly objected to the use of an edited version of his confession, which he said produced a distorted and misleading account of the crime.

"But the Supreme Court noted the statement was edited to remove Ms. Windsor's statements, which helped give Fetterly a fair trial."

The defense did not submit any statements indicating prejudice or lack of prejudice in the community, the majority said, and did not use all its challenges in jury selection.

"Waiver of pretrial challenges has been found to indicate satisfaction with the panel chosen," the majority said.

Bistline contended Harris made so many pre-trial statements that almost nothing new was introduced at the trial.

Dayton voters face empty ballot Nov. 5

DAYTON (AP) — When voters in Dayton go to the polls Nov. 5 they will find only a blank ballot.

City Clerk Elva Atkinson said Monday no one has filed to run for either of the two four-year city council seats in this southeastern Idaho community of 350, despite letters sent to all residents soliciting candidates.

"I feel the two council posts probably will be filled by write-ins, but I have not heard anyone express an interest in being a write-in candidate or sponsoring one," she said.

Under Idaho law, if no one's name is written in, the council positions are filled through appointment by the mayor.

Brent Nay, one of two incumbents who chose not to file for re-election, said he doesn't have time for public office because of a 180-mile daily commute to and from work in Clearfield, Utah.

"I'm involved in other civic work and I'm trying to start a new business, so I don't feel I can spare the time," he said.

The other incumbent, Terry Shepherd, said he also has other involvements and drives to Soda Springs, 30 miles from Dayton, each day for work.

Mayor Eugene Griffith said it probably is the fact that there are no real issues facing city government that accounts for the lack of interest this year.

Griffith said he still is hoping someone will become interested enough that a write-in campaign will be organized.

Purce wins ISU post

POCATELLO (AP) — Former Idaho Department of Health and Welfare director Thomas L. Purce has been selected to head the new Idaho State University Research Park.

ISU President Richard Bowen chose Purce, 38, who previously served as mayor of Pocatello and currently is chief operating officer of Power Engineers Inc. in Halley.

Purce accepted the position Monday and will begin his duties sometime after Jan. 1, ISU spokesman Rip Kutty said.

Bowen said he was comfortable with his decision because "Purce is an Idahoan, has had a multifaceted career, he understands the needs of both the university and the community and is an individual who can work with people and has a great deal of drive."

The research park, located above the ISU campus and east of Interstate 15, will make space and services available for research-oriented businesses to locate in Pocatello. It is an ISU project, but the university is working with the Greater Pocatello Development Corp. to establish the park.

Retail receipts slide

BOISE (AP) — Third-quarter revenues from retail sales in Idaho were down more than $56.7 million from the same period last year, according to figures released by the Idaho Department of Revenue and Taxation.

Statewide retail sales for July through September totaled about $3.9 billion. The 1984 total for the same period was more than $4 billion, based on "reportable" sales receipts, department officials said.

"I don't think I can offer a really good explanation of why this is happening," said Martin Peterson, the head of Idaho's Division of Financial Management. "However, I can say that the trend is statewide."

Peterson said there are a number of factors which could explain the drop in receipts, which in turn means declining sales tax revenue to state coffers. Foremost is an apparent hesitance by consumers to undertake major debts.

"People are hanging onto their money longer," he said. "They appear unwilling to take a chance on the state's economy undergoing any significant improvements."

However, Alan Dornfest, a sales tax analyst for the state Tax Commission, said while the statewide downturn is a fact, lower figures for individual counties may be misleading and should be taken "with a large grain of salt."

Man arrested in hit-and-run death of teen

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A Kootenai County man has been arrested in connection with last week's hit-and-run death of a teen-ager, police said Monday.

Sheriff's deputies said Keith C. Edwards, 33, was charged with being an accessory to vehicular manslaughter. He reportedly is the owner of the vehicle which struck and killed Shane Van Uiter, 16, of Rathdrum, while he was jogging along U.S. Highway 95 on Oct. 21. His body was found the next morning by the side of the highway.

Police are still seeking the vehicle. "We are confident of his involvement, but we have not put him behind the wheel," said Kootenai County Sheriff's Sgt. Earl Minnans.

Edwards, an unemployed truck driver, was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond pending a court appearance.

Edwards told police he loaned the vehicle to a foster brother, who drove it to California the night of the death to check on an employment offer.

Efforts to verify the story have been futile, said Capt. Phil Broesch of the Idaho State Police.

Police said they were led to Edwards by an anonymous tip last week.

Post Falls trucker was electrocuted

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A logging truck driver, first thought by authorities to be a heart attack victim, actually was killed by electrocution, according to Kootenai County Coroner Dr. Robert West.

Jerry Chambers, 31, of Post Falls, was killed last Wednesday while he was trying to tie down a load near U.S. 95 south of here, authorities said.

After an autopsy was conducted, West said Monday the cable Chambers was throwing over the load apparently touched a 7,200-volt power line directly above the truck. Chambers died instantly, he said.

State must pay lawsuit fees

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge here has awarded nearly $63,000 in legal fees and expenses against the state in a lawsuit filed over conditions at the Youth Services Center, St. Anthony.

In an order signed late Friday afternoon, U.S. District Judge Ray McNichols awarded youth advocacy organizations $44,015 in legal fees and $18,893 in expenses.

Department of Health and Welfare division administrator John Morgan said Monday although he felt the judgment was "a little bit generous," he probably will recommend to the Health and Welfare board that it be accepted with no appeals.

The board would have to ask the Legislature for money to pay the award, Morgan said. He disputed that the lawsuit caused changes in the St. Anthony facility for juvenile offenders.

The Youth Law Center and the National Center for Youth Law, two youth advocacy organizations located in San Francisco, asked more than $230,000 in legal fees and expenses after winning partial victory in a lawsuit against the state.

The Idaho Legal Aid Society also claimed a small part of the legal fees and expenses.

McNichols refused to award the full amount, saying he found that the youth advocacy organizations had proven that violations occurred.

"over-prepared" and "over-tried" the case. He granted only one-third of the amounts he found to be proper.

The judge also found that contrary to arguments by the Department of Health and Welfare, that the lawsuit and threats that it would be filed were a significant factor in the department stopping practices both sides conceded to be improper.

After last-minute negotiations failed to produce a settlement, McNichols presided over an eight day trial in May of this year.

In July, he ruled that the youth advocacy organizations had proven that violations occurred.

Teachers OK board's offer

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — After months of negotiations, teachers in Fremont County have accepted a base salary contract with an increase of $300 per year, the amount the school board offered in September.

Teachers have tentatively agreed to a base of $14,000, said officials of the Fremont Education Association.

The negotiating team of teachers had been asking for $14,000.

Settlements throughout the state have been ranging from about 3 1/2 percent to 4 percent.

Idaho

Rumblings continue 2 years, after ruinous Challis quake

BOISE (AP) — It's been two years since an earthquake measuring 7.3 on the Richter scale rumbled through Idaho on Oct. 28, 1983, killing two children in Challis and shaking buildings hundreds of miles from the central Idaho epicenter.

It was the most powerful quake to hit the continental United States in 25 years, and a Boise State University geologist said aftershocks continue at the rate of about one a month at a magnitude of 2 or 3.

Jack Pelton, an assistant professor of geology and geophysics at BSU, said the aftershocks would taper off over the next 20 to 30 years.

But he said there are other significant faults in Idaho that have the potential to unleash another major temblor. And despite advances in technology and earthquake prediction, there's no way to tell when another quake may strike, Pelton said.

Halloween myth — sociologist

Tainted-treat threat distorted

By MALCOLM RITTER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK—Fears about "Halloween sadists" who give trick-or-treaters candy containing sharp objects or poisons are exaggerated, based on a myth that diverts attention from greater dangers to children, a sociologist says.

"We've blown this thing way out of proportion," said Joel Best, a sociology professor at California State University at Fresno, who described what he called the urban legend of the Halloween sadist in the November issue of Psychology Today.

While incidents of tainted candy occur occasionally, "there is no reason to fear that Halloween sadism is a major threat to children," Best said Sunday in a telephone interview. "I think we waste, nationally, just an enormous amount of energy on this problem and it isn't worth it."

Attention would be better spent on hazards like unsafe toys, cribs and other consumer products, as well as school bus accidents, he said. Important Halloween dangers are those of children being hit by cars or tangled in their costumes, he said.

In the magazine, Best wrote, "Everyone knows that Halloween sadists have been responsible for countless deaths and serious injuries. Fortunately, everyone is wrong."

He reported finding no evidence of death or serious injury from Halloween sadists between 1958 and 1984 in the Los Angeles Times, the Chicago Tribune, the Fresno Bee and the index to the New York Times. No reports of serious injuries appeared in an index to popular magazines or a medical journal database, he said.

The newspaper search found 76 specific instances of tainted Halloween candy, and allusions to hundreds more, Best said. One child required stitches, which was by far the most serious injury reported, he said. Sunday. Most injuries were on the order of pinpricks.

None met his definition of serious injury, which included hospitalization, he said. Best excluded a 1974 Texas case of an 8-year-old who died after his father gave him cyanide-laced candy. In a 1970 case of apparent Halloween sadism, a child's death was later traced to heroin he had found in a relative's home, Best said.

Best said he was unaware of a

Cranston, R.I., youth who collapsed in 1982 after eating a candy bar that police said was treated with an insecticide.

He said his point is not that such incidents never happen, but that they are not as widespread as believed.

One explanation for the lack of serious injuries comes from investigations by reporters, police and candy manufacturers that found most reported incidents were hoaxes, often perpetrated by children, Best said.

"I think that a child who discovers a contaminated treat is in for a lot of—favorable—adult attention: parents expressing relief that their child was not hurt, perhaps the local reporter coming out, getting their name in the newspaper, perhaps talking to a police officer," Best said. "It sounds to me like a way to get pretty important."

But he said it is "perfectly unreasonable" for parents to inspect manageable, it endures because their children's Halloween candy, parents feel they can take steps just as they should make sure the child can see out of his mask and does not run around unsupervised on streets after dark.

His 3-year-old son will go trick-or-treating for the first time this year, and "I plan to inspect my son's treats; but primarily with an eye to separating out the junk food," he said.

Best, who has studied Halloween candy stories for 15 years, called the Halloween sadist an example of an urban legend, a tale that warns about the dangers of modern life. Such legends are usually passed by word of mouth as something that happened "to a friend of a friend," Best said.

The Halloween sadist legend became popular about 15 years ago as a symbol of parental fears for their children, Best says. Today, as parents hear about child abuse, kidnapping, child pornography and other threats that seem unmanageable, it endures because parents feel they can take steps against it, he says.

Orchestra soothes the stranded

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fog closed down the international airport here Monday, but an impromptu concert by a Soviet symphony orchestra soothed the stranded. The "Moscow Virtuosi," when told they'd probably have to wait another day for their flight home, unpacked their instruments and gave a program of Tchaikovsky, Mozart and Haydn, delighting the hundreds of other would-be passengers at Surcin Airport, the Tanjug news agency reported. The fog rolled in Sunday, forcing suspension of flights at all major airports.

Bronze stars awarded to 33 Filipinos

SEATTLE (AP) — Bronze stars have been awarded to 33 Filipino soldiers who helped defend Bataan and Corregidor from the Japanese in World War II.

In a ceremony Sunday, the men were praised by Philippine Consul General Jose Syjuco Jr. for having "bought valuable time for the rest of the free world to marshal their forces."

The medals, for meritorious achievement during the defense of the Philippines in 1941 and 1942, were presented to members of the Bataan and Corregidor Survivors Association, or their widows or next-of-kin.

Many of these honored survivors of the Bataan Death March, in which about 60,000 prisoners were forced to march 70 to 90 miles to prison camps. An estimated 10,000 men died on the march, and about 30,000 more died in the camps.

A military review was conducted Sunday by units of the 124th U.S. Army Reserve Command at Fort Lawton. The medals were presented by Maj. Gen. Garnet Reynolds.

Couple flees across border

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — An East German couple fled across the heavily guarded Communist border into the West German state of Bavaria, police said Monday.

Police said the two crossed over to West Germany under cover of darkness just as East German border guards began searching the area with spot lights, apparently in an attempt to prevent the escape.

East German guards are normally under orders to shoot would-be escapees.

The couple reached the western side of the border in tattered clothes but unharmed.

The escape took place "over the weekend" and the two were picked up by a West German border patrol and taken to a shelter for refugees, a police statement said.

Police described the two as a 28-year-old laborer and his 20-year-old girlfriend.

West German authorities declined to identify the couple or to provide details of their escape, citing security reasons.

Parents demand change in discipline policy

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Concern continued to brew Monday over Friday's cancellation of the homecoming pep assembly at Twin Falls High School because of a beer breakfast that went bust for more than 50 high school students.

Parent Cindy Dalton said Monday a group of parents will present petitions to the School Board at its Nov. 12 meeting calling for changes in the district's discipline policy.

So far, she said, 20 parents have collected 300 signatures on the petitions, which also demand that high school administrators formally apologize to the Twin Falls High School student body for canceling the assembly. Dalton said organizers hope to add another 200 signatures in the next two weeks.

"We don't want to go in as large, foot-stomping parents to the board," but we do want some policy change," Dalton said. "We don't believe mass discipline is fair in any way. The majority of students were not involved, and didn't deserve the punishment they received."

Mass discipline was not the intent of Friday's assembly cancellation, said Board member Gary Fay Monday. Rather, it was a safety issue, he said. And he added that district principal Frank Charlton followed the district's policy "to the T."

"The board has discussed it, and it's my opinion that no attempt was made to punish innocent students," Fay said. "I think parents would have been upset if their children were in a situation that caused injuries."

A 7:30 a.m. party Friday at Shoshone Falls that reportedly involved both beer and marijuana triggered the cancellation of the 10:40 a.m. assembly after students arrived at school intoxicated. Numbers varied between 30 and 60 students involved.

Charlton said Friday that the school did not sponsor assemblies when "a large number of students arrived drunk and on pot."

District policy does not allow students to attend school if they are intoxicated. And it leaves discipline up to administrators. Fay said the district's discipline policy was "solid and the state said so."

He said if petitioners came up with better suggestions, the board would listen.

Dalton's suggested policy change — to not allow students to remain in school if they endanger other students — varied little from current policy. Still, she questioned why "if the administration was concerned with safety, would it not send students pulled from classes before the assembly?"

"I heard there were teachers who were scared to death because some inebriated students were in their classes," she said. "If the teacher was afraid, why didn't they call administrators? And why weren't the parents of those students notified immediately to come and get their kids?"

Charlton said the teachers did notify him and his staff, but there was no way to check out the situation without calling in each student; and that took time. He said when parents began arriving to discuss the matter, it took more time away from interviewing the students involved.

"I think when people hear all the facts, they'll be supportive," he said.

By Monday, Charlton said, his staff identified 40 of the students who were allegedly drunk and "we're not finished yet." Of the 40, he said, 10 to 12 would be suspended or put on probation, "depending on the severity of each case." He said he doubted any would be expelled by the board.

'Killer' disease gets Lee 14 years

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 5th District Court judge Monday sentenced Richard Allen Lee of Hansen to 14 years in prison for killing two people Aug. 16 as a result of drunken driving.

The 23-year-old Lee showed little emotion at the sentences. His wife of seven months was in tears.

"It takes my husband's life away," Debbie Lee said.

At the hearing, Judge Daniel Meehl said an alcoholic shouldn't be absolved from legal responsibility and he imposed the maximum sentence — seven years imprisonment — on each of the two felony counts of vehicular manslaughter filed against Lee.

The sentences were made consecutive. Meehl fixed one of the sentences at seven years, but not the second one. In terms of time behind bars, Lee will have to serve at least seven years in prison, but he could be eligible for parole after serving one-third of the second seven-year sentence.

Lee was accused of causing an accident in which Hagerman rancher Fred Barrett, 67, and Barrett's sister, Margaret Lyons, 60, of Hereford, Texas, died.

Meehl said alcoholism permeated the case to the extent that not only the two people who died, but Lee was the victim.

Lee, who began drinking at age 13, had refused to treat his drinking problem or to even admit he had a problem, the judge stated. While alcoholism can't be absolved, from legal responsibility for criminal acts, Meehl added.

"When drinking, the defendant has shown a total disregard for our traffic laws, as well as a propensity to be a very dangerous man," Meehl said.

Despite his burglary and two DUI convictions, Lee was as far from the "classic case of killer as you can get. He (Lee) is basically a decent sort and hard worker. His mother-in-law described Lee as a loving, kind person, Meehl said.

Meehl said he fixed the first man-

Bellevue residents told to boil water

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state Division of Environment Monday issued a boil-water order for the city of Bellevue to protect public health while problems with the community's contaminated water supply are taken care of.

Gary Burkett, of the division's regional office in Twin Falls, said the order was prompted by abnormally high levels of coliform bacteria found in samples from the well supplying the town's drinking water.

Residents will be required to boil their water until the well is disinfected, a process which Burkett said should take about 10 days. Residents should not, however, drop the precautionary boiling until the order is officially lifted, he said.

Coliform is often associated with fecal matter from warm blooded animals — either from humans or livestock. It can also stem from soil bacteria, according to Burkett. While coliform bacteria are not necessarily harmful on their own, they are an indicator that other pathogenic, or disease-causing, bacteria may be present, he added.

Tests of the town's spring water on Oct. 6 found 12 colonies of coliform bacteria per 100 milliliters of water, Burkett said. The agency then asked city officials to cut off the city's spring-water source and use only water from the city well.

Tests on Oct. 22 of well water, however, found even higher coliform counts of 41 colonies per 100 milliliters of water, Burkett said.

The standard for drinking water is no colonies of coliform, Burkett said.

The usual procedure for disinfecting a well is to chlorinate. Chlorine, Burkett said, will kill the bacteria or source of bacteria. "If it's not a renewing source, it won't come back," Burkett said.

Bellevue has a history of problems with its drinking water supplies. The city has no municipal sewer system, but instead depends entirely on private septic tanks.

In the past, coliform problems have generally been confined to the springs which supply the town, Burkett said.

Former Gooding man takes fatal, 80-foot fall

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — A mountain climbing accident in Hells Canyon on the Snake River Saturday claimed the life of a former resident of Gooding and Ketchum.

Reports from the Baker County, Ore., sheriff's office said the victim, Peter Leon Goodman, 36, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Goodman of Gooding, died when he fell about 80 feet down a rock face while he and his wife were climbing and hiking near Redfish Cave. Officers said the woman spent about five hours trapped on a ledge above the victim, until her cries for help attracted campers in the canyon below. The Halfway, Ore., couple was climbing between Hells Canyon Dam and Oxbow Dam, just above Big Bar Campground.

Goodman and his wife, Betsy Meyer Goodman, had probably taken a wrong turn or somehow lost the trail, said Ann Colton, deputy clerk in the Gooding and Oxbow Dam area.

She said Mrs. Goodman was leading the way and had pulled herself into a new position by using a large rock for support. When she looked back, her husband was sliding down the rugged rocky face after the couple had just given away with him. Colter said Mrs. Goodman was unable to climb down to where her husband fell, but her calls to him had received no response.

"We believe the accident happened about 5 p.m. Our office was notified about 9 p.m. that evening," Colton said. "The two may have been unfamiliar with the area. At any rate, they got themselves into a position where going back down was impossible. They were trying to go up to get out of their situation."

Officers from both Baker and Adams counties responded after campers reported the accident. A helicopter crew recovered the body of her husband. He was dead at the scene, officers reported.

Colton said the entire area where the two were climbing can be extremely treacherous for climbers unfamiliar with it.

Goodman was born at Sun Valley and attended schools in Ketchum and Gooding.

Probe of shootings in Jerome goes on

JEROME — A ruling on the deaths of a Jerome couple found shot to death in their home Oct. 10 has yet to be made, pending completion of an investigation by Jerome City Police officers.

Sgt. Lonny Meadows of the Jerome Police Department said he has not received any results of tests made during the investigation, but he hopes to get some results in the coming week.

Pauline Slater, 68, a terminal cancer patient, and her husband, John Slater, 81, were found the night of Oct. 10, both with bullet wounds in the head. Mrs. Slater died at the scene, while her husband died en route to the hospital.

The man suffered a bullet wound in the back of the head which entered the upper skull and traveled downward coming out between the left ear and eye. A .38-caliber revolver was found near his body.

Originally it was believed the man had killed his wife to end her suffering and then taken his own life. Officers say this may be the case, but they question the probability of Slater being able to inflict his own wound in the upper back of the head.

Jail-crowding hearing put off until Nov. 12

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County will present evidence Nov. 12 on why 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt should not close down the 70-year-old County Jail.

A hearing on a request by two inmates and their attorney, Greg Fuller, had been scheduled for today. Twin Falls County Prosecutor R. Ellen Baxter wanted more time to prepare for the "show cause hearing," so it was rescheduled.

Fuller filed last Tuesday — on behalf of Michael Goodman and Ted Matney — a lawsuit against the county and Board of County Commissioners. The two men want the court to order the county to reduce the jail population, close the jail and begin taking action to build a new jail.

The men claim the jail, located on the fourth floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, is unsafe, overcrowded and uncostly to maintain.

Fuller Tuesday also filed a request for a hearing on why Hurlbutt shouldn't impose a temporary order against the county to reduce the jail population and start finding funds for a new jail or close the jail.

The temporary order would stand until the court would rule on the main complaint.

Conservative groups targeting Idaho education official says

By DEAN'S MURPHY

SUN VALLEY — Events of the last several years have set the stage for a new conservative political organization, says the "new right" idea, but it's not yet a reality.

Speaking to a "noon-time luncheon" for public school teachers, a "conservative" group said the "new right" idea has been in the works for some time.

Moore said Idaho has been targeted by conservative groups. "If you feel you're being picked, you're being picked," Moore said.

Moore said the recent increase present. Among them were the in activity by conservative groups began with the passage of the 1 Percent Initiative, which limits the amount school district taxes can be increased. He said the 1 Percent Initiative is not itself a political organization, but it's the stage for a new conservative agenda.

Moore said right-wing politics "mean for public school teachers, any racist, and a reaction to more liberals." Moore said.

Moore said Idaho has been targeted by conservative groups. "If you feel you're being picked, you're being picked," Moore said.

Moore said the recent increase present. Among them were the unset of the late senator Frank Church by Sen. Steve Symms. R-Idaho, in a race heavily funded by conservative lobbying groups.

Moore said the "new right" idea has been in the works for some time. He said the passage of the right-to-work bill by last year's Legislature, the publication of several anti-national Education Association comic books, and the proposal of legislation to require the teaching of scientific creationism are all part of a trend that makes far-right activities more acceptable.

The deaths weren't intentional, he added. Yet, the sentences were severe because Lee shows a risk of drinking again.

"At present, (the) defendant is very remorseful and has expressed a desire for treatment hereafter," lacking. Considering the damage the defendant has already done, however, society cannot afford to take a gamble on him. His protection requires a lengthy period of incarceration for Mr. Lee," Mehl said.

In a letter to the Times-News last week, Lee claimed people with cancer and other diseases find support and prayers, while alcoholics find condemnation.

The punishment should encourage those with a drinking problem to seek help and deter others from drinking while drunk, Mehl said.

Mehl also imposed a six-month jail sentence on a related misdemeanor charge of driving without privileges, but he gave Lee credit for time served in Falls County Jail and suspended the remainder.

At the time of the accident Lee's drivers license had been suspended on a DUI conviction.

In a letter to the Times-News last week, Lee claimed people with cancer and other diseases find support and prayers, while alcoholics find condemnation.

"I am an alcoholic. I am powerless

Mrs. Lee said her husband was made an example by being sent to prison.

"He needs treatment and he's not going to get it there," she said.

Mehl continued, "Mrs. Lee said her husband was made an example by being sent to prison."

At the hearing last week Lee's public defender asked the court to place Lee in a state program for alcoholism. The prosecution recommended the maximum sentence on both felonies.

Twin Falls native teacher of year

BOISE (AP) — Joanne Tegan Thompson, a biology teacher at Capital High School in Boise and winner of a presidential award in 1984 as the state's outstanding science teacher, has been chosen Idaho Teacher of the Year for 1985-86, state Department of Education officials said Monday.

Ms. Thompson grew up in Twin Falls, and received a bachelor's science degree from the University of Idaho and a master of arts degree from the College of Idaho, as well as additional credits from several universities.

She teaches biology and advanced placement biology to high school students at the Boise school, where she has worked for 14 years.

Besides teaching, Education Department officials said Ms. Thompson has led in-service training for the Boise School District and worked on the state committee to formulate biology course guidelines.

She is active in professional organizations such as the Idaho Science Teachers Association, the Idaho Society for Energy and Environmental Education, National Science Teachers Association, National Biology Teachers Association, Association for Curriculum Development, and the Boise, Idaho and National education associations.

Runners up for the title were Ellen Howard, a fourth-grade teacher at Lakeview Elementary in Nampa, and Shirley Clark, who teaches kindergarten, first and second grades at Albion Elementary in the Cassia School District.

Andrus challenged to help save timber sale

BOISE (AP) — Lt. Gov. David Leroy, on a foreign trade mission to Saudi Arabia, is calling on former governor and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to help block a lawsuit over a proposed timber sale that could cost Idahoans "hundreds of jobs."

The Idaho Environmental Defense League has filed a lawsuit in an attempt to halt a proposed U.S. Forest Service sale of logs damaged by fires last summer in the Payette National Forest.

"I call on Cecil Andrus to join with me, state his opinion about going ahead with the sale, and improve the Idaho Environmental Defense League to drop its lawsuit immediately," Leroy said in a statement issued by his Boise office on Monday.

Leroy, who is running for the Republican nomination for governor in 1986, urged the Forest Service in a letter several weeks ago to proceed with the sale as quickly as possible to help boost Idaho's beleaguered timber industry.

Motorcyclist stable after weekend accident

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls motorcyclist was listed in stable condition Monday, and three Gooding residents were treated and released following separate weekend traffic accidents.

Michael C. Burton, 17, of Twin Falls, remained in the intensive care unit at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with head injuries. His condition was upgraded from critical to stable.

He was thrown from his motorcycle Sunday afternoon in Rock Creek Canyon, south of Hansen, when it failed to negotiate a curve.

"Ray" McLaughlin, 17, of Gooding was cited for inattentive driving after his vehicle left U.S. Highway 93 and 1-81 in Jerome County.

Sunday night, and rolled 11 times. He and his passengers, Ted Warner, 19, and Belinda Rowlands, 15, of Gooding, were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released after treatment of minor injuries.

The accident occurred at 9:53 p.m. near the junction of highways 93 and 1-81 in Jerome County.

"However, I think our national public opinion is made up of the opinions of all of us and I think, as each goes through this coming year, which is the International Year of Peace, if we think peace, if we act peacefully, it will have a reflection here in our own community."

Petersen said the United Nations provides a forum for the exchange of views among the various nations of the world, no matter how diverse those views may be from one nation to another.

Graydon Stanley, a member of the International Year of Peace steering committee, which sponsored the event, said his committee is pleased with the proclamations, describing the documents as "mandates for action and enthusiastic local, and state response to the goals of the IYP."

The governor's proclamation called on Idaho residents to rededicate themselves to work at all times to eliminate the barriers to world peace — especially those which include all forms of prejudice toward race, nationality or creed.

Sister challenges wellness

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BOISE—Both mental health professionals and the mentally ill themselves must "challenge the wellness" within each patient rather than nurture their illness.

This was the upshot message of a dynamically recovered Catholic sister who endured 15 years of severe depression. The luncheon address of Sister Mary Vincent Otto, San Diego, highlighted a two-day mental health conference in Boise last weekend.

The conference on family and community support networks was sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Idaho, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, Psychiatric Center and Alliance for the Mentally Ill in Boise, Canyon County and Southeast Idaho.

Vince, as both the speaker and her recently published autobiography are called, gives a dramatic account of her steady progression from a little girl fearfully trying to please a strict mother into an emotional cripple who struggled for years to live up to what was expected of her as a parochial school teacher and principal.

She transmitted her early fear of displeasing Mama to her sister superiors and never allowed herself to "get in touch with her own feelings." Although she loved teaching, her appointment as principal at age 26 and her inability to handle stress brought on severe depression.

Through lack of understanding of the seriousness of her condition and church bureaucratic muddling which the sister kindly describes as "part of that time of history" she needlessly lost her left eye. Gradually she also lost her enthusiasm for living and developed all the "classical" symptoms of depression which no one recognized.

"My condition was as much a mystery to my superiors as it was to me," said the vigorous sister, who now is a successful marriage counselor and serves on the National Mental Health Association board. "All I knew was I had an intolerable pain but you couldn't put a bandage on it."

Although a woman of strong Christian faith, she said during her illness "God became only a three letter word with a small 'g' and her only comfort came from true friends who simply showed they cared."

After 10 psychiatric hospitalizations, during which she consumed "buckets of anti-psychotic medication," over 20 electric shock treatments, drank heavily and was raped, she was "written off as chronic and hopeless."

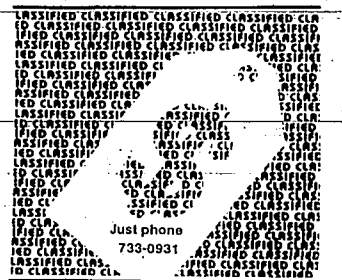

But in 1975 she experienced a dramatic turnaround as a psychiatrist in Council Bluffs, Iowa, where she had been sent as a last resort by her superiors, challenged her by saying she was sure she could recover and become a counselor.

Her recovery began after her long repressed anger erupted and she wept for 12 hours. She experienced reconciliation and forgiveness with the sister who had caused her blindness and started "learning to live all over again."

She obtained permission to return to graduate school to become a family counselor and left her order for the more democratic Sisters of Christian Community. "Now instead of having a 'Vow of poverty' I was living one," she quipped. She travels widely, sharing her recovery story and stressing that "I need not be the exception."

She emphasized that parents of mentally ill children should "get off the guilt trip" of worrying about what they did wrong. The origin of the illness is unimportant, the sister said, during a Saturday workshop, urging parents to "not let themselves be manipulated by those with great dependency needs."

"Don't blame slaves—like making your son's bed if he's capable of making it," she said. Many mental health clients, families of patients attended the sessions as well as professional providers.

Donor's family not charged

DEAR ABBY: When my driver's license was due for renewal this month, I decided that at age 70, it was time to do my bit for humanity and have "Organ Donor" stamped on my new license.

When I told some friends what I had done, I was informed that by my demise it would be very costly to my heirs, as my estate would be charged for removing my organs and also for the cost of the transplants!

This is something I had not considered. Since you have access to information from the top sources, it would be a service to those who are considering donating their organs after death to have the facts. Thanks from...

MARGARET, F.L.A. I called the Living Will, a national organ donor registry and placement service located in Houston, Texas.

Herma Breeden, referral coordinator, said: "Here we go again. Some people will believe whatever they hear, no matter how unreliable the source. As plainly as I can state it, there is no charge to the donor or the donor's family for organ donations. The donor hospital (where the donor died) bills the transplant facility that comes to recover the donated organs. The transplant facility that receives the donated organs pays the costs of organ donation, not the family of the donor.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

"However, the next of kin will receive a bill from the hospital for the care the patient received when the hospital was trying to save his life. This bill is the same they would have received if the patient had lived or had not been a donor. You still have to pay for the care you receive when you are still alive in the hospital but NOT for the donation of the organs after you are declared dead."

"Some hospitals have not participated in the transplant program and do not know the proper procedures. The transplant facility instructs the donor facility to send the charges to it. If the donor hospital has sent any charges for donation to a family, they are in error, and the family should refuse to pay any bill for donation of the organs. The hospital should send the bill directly to the transplant facility, and the hospital will be reimbursed."

"The donor's family should NEVER be charged for the compassionate gesture of donating a better life to others. It is the policy of all transplant programs to pay for any additional costs entailed by the donation of organs."

DEAR ABBY: I hope I'm not too late to tell "Going Bananas" that there is definitely a correct way to eat a banana. I learned it in the late '50s when I was a graduate student at Smith College.

One evening when the dessert consisted of a fruit bowl including unpeeled bananas, our art instructor selected a banana, and showed us how to eat it. (She said she learned it in Switzerland.)

The banana is placed on one's fruit plate, concave side up. With the aid of a fruit knife, the stem edge is notched, then the uppermost strip of peel is removed, making the banana look like a "boat." The banana is then eaten from the "boat" with a teaspoon.

Weddings

Roessler-Whitesell

RICHFIELD—Ellen Marie Roessler and Nick Dale Whitesell were married Aug. 10 in the Assembly of God Church in Richfield.

Rev. Stan Tatko, Kamiah, officiated. Betty McRoberts was organist, Fran Tatko, Kamia, was pianist; Kenneth Roessler, Boise, violinist; and Lori Piper, Crystal Hunt, Cindy Roessler and Miss Wickham sang.

The bride is the daughter of Cecelia Roessler, Richfield, and Ray Roessler, Gooding, and the bridegroom's parents are Dale and Mary Jane Whitesell, Richfield.

Annie Warbis, Shoshone, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lisa Hubsmith and Tami Charlton, sister of the bridegroom. Angel Roessler and Sarah Roessler, Kuna, were flower girls.

Jimmy Newberry, Twin Falls, was best man with Wade Wickham and Bob Charlton serving as groomsmen. David Roessler and Jerome Roessler, brothers of the bride, ushered—and Jeremy Charlton was ringbearer.

Nick and Ellen Whitesell

Monica Ward and Angie Parker were guest book attendants. Annie Whitesell and Mary Wickham handled gifts.

The newlyweds live in Twin Falls where the bridegroom works at OK Auto Systems.

Barn now bridal store

ATKINS, Iowa (AP)—Where, satin gowns now hang, calves used to huddle. You'd have found haystacks where the bridesmaids browse. And in the old days, if there'd been mirrors where brides now pose, they'd have reflected the unblinking mugs of cows.

Welcome to Hope's Bridal Boutique, once a dairy barn, now transformed by plush remodeling, a new line of business, female occupants of a different species—and a bright pink coat of paint.

"When people drive by and see a sign that says Hope's Bridal Boutique and it's a barn, they just can't believe it," said Carleen Kahle, who has worked at Hope's since it opened 13 years ago.

"The most often comment is, 'Was this a real barn?' Was there livestock?" Mrs. Kahle said.

The bridal boutique is the brainchild of Hope Kostlo, but the barn was the work of her husband, Kenny, employees and relatives recalled.

"Hope started in her house, decorating cakes," Mrs. Kahle said. "Then she outgrew the house and wanted to build a building and Kenny said, 'Well, the barn's sitting right there.'"

The barn had been vacant for about 10 years when Mrs. Kostlo began renovating to make it fit for white wedding gowns.

College cage payoff charges spread

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Offers of up to $100,000, cars and other major gifts have been used as bait in recruiting campaigns for the nation's top high school basketball players, a Lexington newspaper reported Monday.

The Lexington Herald-Leader alleged that nearly one-fifth of a few dozen players interviewed for its copyright story said they had received improper offers from college recruiters.

Everett Stephens, a sophomore at Purdue, said that as a high school student he was offered "a real good deal" on a new Mazda RX-7 sports car by former Evansville Coach Dick Walters.

Walters denied having made the offer to Stephens, but acknowledged he might have told the player he could make enough money from a summer job to buy a used car.

"That's a joke," Everett Stephens was never offered anything here," Walters said. Walters said he has never cheated on NCAA rules, but that some coaches were forced into difficult situations if they did not produce winning programs, the Herald-Leader said.

"If you approach this recruiting business on a national basis, it's impossible not to see what's going on," Walters said. "I don't think there's any coach out there that is not placed in a situation where the thought of cheating doesn't cross his mind, and for the sole purpose of trying to maintain his livelihood."

The newspaper quoted former DePaul assistant coach Kenny McReynolds as saying Ben Wilson, a Chicago prep star who was shot to death last November, had been offered $100,000 to attend a particular school, which wasn't named.

Chris Morris, now a sophomore at Auburn University, said an assistant coach at the University of Georgia offered him a car to attend Georgia.

Morris, one of Georgia's most promising prep players in 1983, recalled that the alleged sales pitch was made on the school's campus at Athens, the paper said.

He told the paper he remembered watching a practice the meeting in the corner of the gym with former Georgia assistant Don Beasley to talk about life as a Georgia basketball player.

"They tell you how good you could be to the team," Morris was quoted as saying. "And I said I needed a car real bad and he said he would see what he could do."

Beasley, who now coaches at Northwestern State University in Louisiana, told the paper Morris took the exchange too seriously.

"I don't think it happened, but if it did, it would have been in total jest," Beasley said. "I would have said, 'Yeah, I'll buy you two cars and a helicopter,' or something just in a joking manner."

Georgia's basketball program was given one-year probation after it was found in violation of recruiting rules.

Also according to the paper, St. John's forward Walter Berry said he was offered $50,000 by a coach who wanted him to attend his school upon completion of junior college.

"Another school offered me a car and different things like that," Berry was quoted as saying.

Another St. John's player, Shelton Jones, said he received several offers as a high school student, the largest being $10,000.

Neither player named the schools that made the alleged offers.

St. John's Coach Lou Carmeseca said that he knew of the $50,000 offer to Berry, but did not report the incident to the NCAA because he wasn't sure about the specifics, the Herald-Leader reported.

The Herald-Leader said it was not known if the National Collegiate Athletic Association was investigating the offers since the school organization does not comment on pending investigations.

Switch Sometime QB Holcomb keeps pressure on foes

By RON FOLKINGA
Times-News Correspondent

KIMBERLY — When Filer's Don Ainsworth broke loose for a 60-yard run against Kimberly in a Canyon Conference game last month, he did something no other player had been able to up to that point: he scored a touchdown against the Kimberly defense.

Although Filer lost that game 42-6, the Wildcats could take pride in the fact that they were the first team to score on the Bulldogs in 1985.

Before Ainsworth crossed the goal line, Kimberly had amassed a string of 15 consecutive quarters without giving up a point. The Bulldogs had defeated Raft River, Murtaugh and Wood River by a combined score of 105-0.

One of the major reasons for the defensive success at Kimberly this year has been the play of defensive end Kurt Holcomb.

Holcomb, a three-year starter and honorable mention all-state pick by the Idaho Statesman last year, has been a thorn in the side of opposing offenses again this year — especially opposing quarterbacks. Maybe that's because "the lanky senior is a quarterback himself" when Kimberly takes the ball.

Even when he missed a game against Gooding because of an injury, Holcomb still managed to be a factor.

"We were disappointed when he wasn't in there," said Gooding coach Bob Milligan. "Our first series was designed to go at him. We stuck with our game plan and the kid they had there didn't react the way we expected Holcomb to react."

Five valley teams begin grid playoffs

BOISE — Pairings for the 1985 Idaho high school football playoffs have been set, with all five Magic Valley teams that have qualified to see action next weekend.

On Friday, District 4 champion Jerome (6-3) will host District 5 runner-up American Falls (4-5) in a first-round Class A-2 contest at 7 p.m. That same evening, District 4 A-3 runner-up Kimberly (7-2) will meet District 2 champion Grangeville (9-2) in the second game of a playoff triple-header in the University of Idaho Kibbie Dome in Moscow. That game is scheduled for approximately 7:30 p.m. MST.

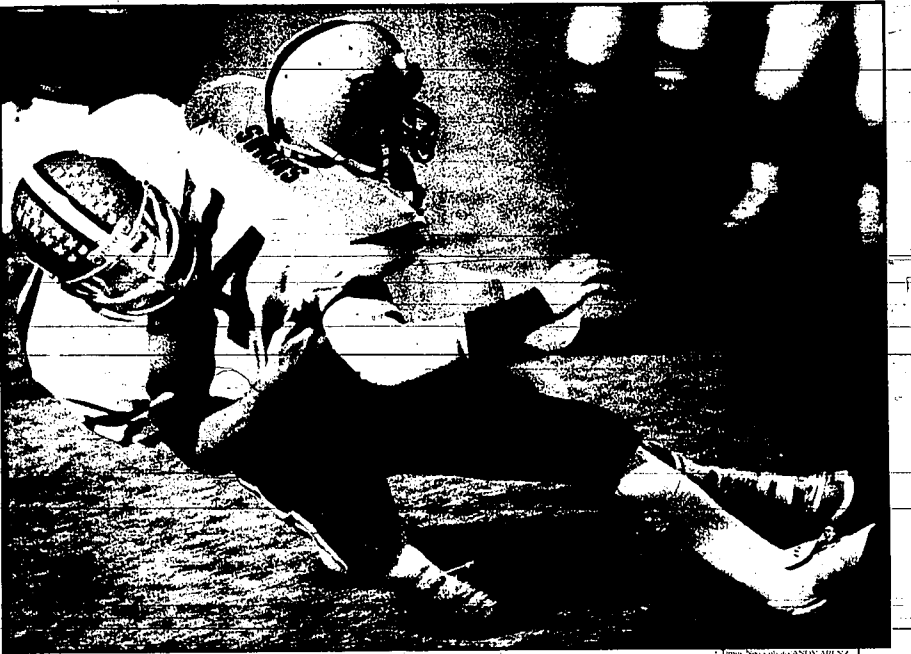

See PLAYOFFS on Page C2

Holcomb and most of his teammates began playing football together in the seventh grade. That may be another reason for the playoff-bound Bulldogs' success this season.

"All of us are real close, we enjoy playing together and doing things together," he says.

Most observers agree though that Holcomb is a big reason for Kimberly's defensive success.

At 6-foot-3, 185 pounds, Holcomb looks somewhat like a smaller version of former Los Angeles Raiders' linebacker Ted

Kimberly defensive end Kurt Holcomb pulls down Glenns Ferry fullback Matt Simons for a loss Hendricks. He has a long, lean frame and an intense look in his eyes. He speaks softly and quietly without any of the bravado one might expect of a two-sport, all-conference athlete.

On the field, Holcomb prefers to let his actions speak for him. Through eight games this season, he had been in on 53 tackles, blocked two punts, knocked down eight passes and accumulated 13 quarterback sacks, including five against Murtaugh.

On offense, he has passed for 490 yards and six touchdowns. Coach Gordon Hogan, who is in his 11th year at Kimberly High, says, "Kurt is as good as any defensive end we've had since I've been here. He has very good agility which makes it extremely hard for other teams to run on him."

"I think he has the potential to play Big Sky ball," adds Hogan. He could put on another 30 pounds and possibly play outside linebacker.

Valley coach Scott Tingey, agrees with Hogan's assessment of Holcomb.

"I think the Big Sky teams would be making a real mistake by not looking at him," says Tingey. "He is one of the best pass-rushing defensive ends we've seen in the last five years. With him at end, he enables the team's other athletes to play better."

Part of his success on the football field can be directly related to his ability as a basketball player. As a junior last year, Holcomb averaged 19.0 points per game for the Bulldogs.

His basketball playing helps to develop the agility and quickness that make him effective as a football player.

It also presents him with the problem of what to do when he goes to college next fall — play football or basketball.

"Right now I'd probably prefer to play basketball," says Holcomb.

Idaho St. breaks into Division I-AA's elect

MISSION, Kan. — For the first time this season, Idaho State University's football team has been ranked in the NCAA Division I-AA college poll.

The Bengals, who upset fourth-ranked Idaho last week, are rated 18th this week, tied with Eastern Kentucky. Both teams have 3-2 records.

The Vandals fell to eighth place in this week's survey, while the University of Nevada at Reno rose from sixth last week to third this week.

Idaho is now 6-2, UNR 7-1.

No other Big Sky Conference teams are ranked this week, but independent Eastern Washington is ranked eighth with the Big Sky teams for the purpose of qualifying for the I-AA playoffs — is ranked 10th this week with a 6-1 mark. Idaho and Eastern Washington play in Moscow Saturday night.

This week marks the Bengals' first appearance in the poll this year.

For the first time since the survey began seven weeks ago, the University of Richmond fell from the poll of poll, supplanted by Middle Tennessee State. The Spiders, 7-1, lost their first game of the season Saturday to Division I-A opponent Rutgers, 20-17.

That left MTSU, 20-17, unbeaten in I-AA team in the country at 7-0.

The poll is compiled by a four-member panel composed of athletic directors of I-AA colleges, including ISU athletic director Babe Cappel.

Billy was hired to groom his successor

By IHERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Billy Martin knew when he became manager of the New York Yankees for the fourth time last April that Lou Piniella was being groomed as his successor, according to Martin's lawyer.

"When George (Yankees owner George Steinbrenner) first asked Billy to come back, he told us he was planning on teaching Lou Piniella to be the future manager," Municipal Judge Ed Sapir told the Associated Press by phone from his home in New Orleans on Monday.

"George made it very clear to us that he didn't know if he wanted Billy to manage one year or two and that it would be a teaching process for Lou Piniella."

Martin's fourth term as manager of the Yankees came to an end Sunday when general manager Clyde King announced that Piniella would be the new manager. Sapir said Martin could remain with the Yankees in another capacity.

Martin still has two years remaining on a five-year contract as a "special assistant" to Steinbrenner.

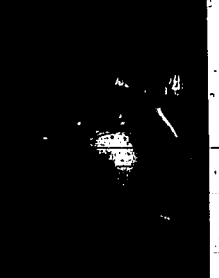

Last April 28, Steinbrenner fired Yogi Berra as manager with the Yankees off to a 6-10 start and 4½ games out of first place in the American League East.

Under Martin's direction, the Yankees compiled a 91-34 record the rest of the way and finished two games behind division-leading Toronto.

However, the fiery Martin was involved in two late-season altercations in a Baltimore hotel bar. On successive nights he became involved in an argument with a customer and then fought with Yankee pitcher Ed Whitson. Martin emerged from the Whitson brawl with a broken arm and two cracked ribs.

Martin also invoked Steinbrenner's wrath when he complained to members of the media that his contract as a "special assistant" should be renegotiated because of the job he did as manager.

Earlier this month, Steinbrenner said that King and vice president Woody Woodward would be responsible for deciding whether Martin remained as manager. In a press after release that didn't mention Martin by name, they announced Sunday that he wouldn't. King would not discuss the managerial change, saying only that "the change was made in the best interests of the New York Yankees."

Asked about Martin's future, King said, "I don't know," and refused to discuss the matter further.

Sapir said Steinbrenner and Martin both tried to contact him over the weekend but he was out of town and was unable to return to New Orleans until Monday because of Hurricane Juan. He said he had not spoken to Martin as of Monday afternoon.

However, Sapir said Steinbrenner told him several weeks ago "that if Billy is not managing anywhere else, he would like to have him in his organization for the long haul, as long as Billy has the desire to remain with the Yankees and perhaps for the rest of his career."

Sapir said he planned to meet with Steinbrenner "in the next couple of weeks and put together a nice package."

Sapir said Steinbrenner told him he was letting King and Woodward make the decision "because he felt too close to Billy, too close to me, too close to the situation."

However, Steinbrenner was quoted as saying: "The reason I took myself out of this thing was because I was simply fed up with everything that happened with Billy after the season. The barroom stuff was bad enough, but then he demanded to renegotiate his contract and made it sound like I was negotiating to him."

"Who else brought him back to manage four times? Who else paid half of his hotel bills that weren't paid? Who else gave him a $200,000 loan to pay his back income taxes? He tried to call my bluff and this is what has happened. I just got fed up."

The 67-year-old Martin replaced Bill Virdon as manager of the Yankees in August 1975 and led the team to its first pennant in 12 years in 1976. He followed that with a World Series championship in 1977 but was fired midway through the 1978 season. The Yankees went on to win the World Series under Bob Lemon.

Martin has managed 873 games for Steinbrenner, the most for any manager during the owner's tenure.

Raiders beat Chargers, run win streak to five

By JOHN NADEL
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It seems all the Los Angeles Raiders need to get their offense in gear is a glimpse of the San Diego Chargers.

Quarterback Marc Wilson picked apart a shaky San Diego secondary and Marcus Allen ran for three touchdowns as the Los Angeles Raiders rolled to a 34-17 National Football League victory over the Chargers Monday night.

"It's always nice to win. It's always nice to win on Monday night," Raiders coach Tom Flores said. "Our offense moved the ball well. Wilson was good. The line played well."

The win was the fifth straight for the Raiders, 6-2, who maintained a tie with Denver for first place in the American Football Conference West at the season's midpoint.

"We're now halfway through and we're tied for first, which is a nice place to be with the toughest part of our schedule starting in the next eight weeks," Flores said.

The Raiders struggled much of the time on offense last year, but totaled 77 points in two games against San Diego. The trend continued Monday night when the Raiders, averaging only 22.7 points through seven games, rolled up their highest score of the season.

The Raider offense accounted for 408 yards, 90 over their season average. Wilson completed 15 of 31 passes for 258 yards, including seven to tight end Todd Christensen for 134 yards, and Allen rushed for 111 yards on 30 carries with scoring runs of three and one yards in the second quarter and four yards in the third period.

Allen, who left the game midway through the fourth quarter with a bruised shoulder, has scored eight touchdowns this season and 52 in 49 regular-season NFL games.

It was obvious to anyone who saw the game that the Raiders played a great game and we played poorly," San Diego coach Don Coryell said. "I was surprised because I thought we'd play a good ball game. I know our fellows were fired up for it, but we just didn't do the job."

"That's the best team we've played, no question about it."

Chargers tight end Kellen Winslow said the whipping reminded him of the Kansas City Royals' 11-0 thumping of the St. Louis Cardinals in Sunday's final game of the World Series.

"It's very painful to take," Winslow said. "Last night I was a Cardinals' fan and tonight I was a San Diego Chargers' fan."

The Raiders went ahead for good only 6:41 into the game on a 20-yard field goal by Chris Barr. Cornerback Mike Haynes intercepted a Dan Fouts pass to give Los Angeles the ball at the San Diego 32-yard line.

Rookie wide receiver Jesse Hester made it 6-0 with a 4:37 remaining in the opening period by scoring on a 13-yard reverse on his first NFL carry.

The Chargers cut the deficit to 10-7 on the first of two Fouts touchdown passes, but then Allen ran for two second-period TDs to put Los Angeles in control. Wilson's 28-yard throw to Christensen set up the Allen's first score of the period and the duo's 48-yard pass play set up the touchdown, that gave the Raiders a 24-7 halftime edge.

Gary Anderson scored twice for the Chargers and Fouts got the final touchdown on a 1-yard pass to Jesse Bendross with 7:20 to play. It was the 21st scoring pass of Fouts' career, eight-best in NFL history.

The Chargers cut the Raiders' early lead to 10-7 when Fouts fired a 52-yard scoring pass to Anderson on the first play of the second quarter.

San Diego showed renewed life in the third period when a 4-yard scoring run by Anderson after 3:21 of the quarter drew the Chargers within 24-14. But Allen scored his third touchdown with a 4:24 to play in the period and Barr added his second field goal, a 35-yarder with 12:35 remaining, to make it 34-14.

The Chargers threatened twice after that, each time coming up empty, before scoring the late touchdown.

The Chargers turned the ball over on downs at the Raider 13-yard line with 7:16 minutes to play, and then lost the ball on downs at the Los Angeles 38 a few minutes later.

Fouts, pressured throughout the game, finished with 23 completions in 50 attempts for 315 yards. He was sacked six times.

San Diego lost its seventh game in a row to the Raiders. Los Angeles has scored 252 points in those games, an average of 36 points per outing.

How did the sixth-best team win it all?

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The seventh game of the 1985 World Series was a bizarre ending to a baseball tournament that may well have left unanswered most of the questions it posed.

Baseball

How, for example, could the Kansas City Royals, with a team ERA of 3.49 during the season, hold the St. Louis Cardinals to 1.86 runs per game after they had averaged 4.61? How did the Royals, a team that had acknowledged its own problem-scoring, wind up with 28 runs while getting only one RBI from their No. 3 hitter, George Brett, and playing without designated hitter Hal McRae?

What happened to the bats of the Cardinals, who hit a National League-leading .264 during the season, but set a record for seven games by batting only .165 in the World Series?

Even without Vince Coleman, where was all the rest of that St. Louis speed? How could a team that stole 314 bases in 162 games of the season suddenly manage only two stolen bases in the World Series?

What, for goodness sake, happened to Joaquin Andujar, or, for that matter, to Buddy Biancalana? Is Andujar that bad? And Biancalana can't be that good, can he? And finally, are the Royals, who staged baseball's most stunning postseason comeback, really the best team in baseball?

Despite rallying from 0-2 and 1-3 deficits in both the American League playoffs and the World Series, the record of the Royals would suggest they were not baseball's best team.

They finished the season with a one-game advantage over the California Angels in the AL West. But their record of 91-71 was only the sixth best in baseball behind the Cards' (101-61), Toronto Blue Jays (99-62), New York Mets (98-64), New York Yankees (97-67) and Los Angeles Dodgers (95-67). Many considered the Cardinals, from their record, the best team in baseball. Some would argue that the real World Series was played from Oct. 1-3, when the New York Mets took two of three from the Cards in St. Louis. Others say the Royals didn't beat the Blue Jays in the

300,000 confetti-throwing fans greet Royalty

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — About 300,000 baseball fans lined downtown streets, hung out of windows or perched in treetops to greet the world champion Kansas City Royals Monday as the city threw a two-hour ticker tape parade that littered the town with a snowstorm of confetti.

The downtown area remained jammed with traffic following the parade and accompanying rally as a steady procession of cars decorated with streamers, balloons and bows sounded their horns in celebration of the city's first World Series victory. Players, team officials and others rode the two-mile route along Grand Avenue to Liberty while some sprayed their hair or Memorial, beaming and waving as 40,000 pounds of shredded paper drifted from downtown office buildings.

Fans along the route, still celebrating Sunday's 11-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in Game 7, skipped school or were given an extended lunch hour to take part in the hoopla. They hoisted themselves on bus stop shelters, bill boards, light poles and others' shoulders to catch glimpses of the new champs.

"Who wants to work when you can be here?" said Duff James, a Kansas City native. "This is the greatest day in history for Kansas City. I own my own business, so I can do whatever I want. And today I want to be a little boy."

Fifteen arches of blue and white helium-filled balloons were draped across the parade route, while blue and white crepe paper streamers fluttered from storefront windows, building ornaments, fire hydrants and even fans who had turned them into armbands or headbands. The parade was forced to stop several times as fans surged into Grand Avenue. The overflow of confetti also caused problems, as at least three cars caught fire and the parade was derailed.

Cars carrying Royals Manager Dick Howser, All-Star third baseman George Brett and center fielder Willie Wilson caught fire. No injuries were reported as the cars either left the route or the smoldering balls of confetti were removed from beneath the vehicles.

playoffs; instead, the better team lost. "I'm not convinced they were a better team," Cardinals pitcher John Tudor said. "For this seven games they were. They played better and they deserved it."

That the Royals deserved to win the World Series is unquestionable. They outplayed St. Louis in every aspect of the game, outpitching, outslugging, outpitching, outrunning and outscoring the Cards.

The final 11-0 victory Sunday night represented, in one game, everything the Royals did right in the Series, and everything the Cardinals did wrong.

Perhaps, then, it is the questions that start with the word "how" that are the most difficult to answer.

The Royals pitching probably was not quite as good as it looked in the World Series, but, on the other hand, it was better than most realized. And that may have been due to a little "understand" by Manager Dick Howser. Bret Saberhagen, 2-0 in the Series including a five-hit shutout in Game 7, could be one of the best in the game. Before postseason began, they were touting the 21-year-old right-hander in Kansas City as the American League's version of Dwight Gooden. In two complete games, he gave up just one run for an ERA of 0.50 and was named the Series' Most Valuable Player. Left-hander Charlie Leibrandt also made a believer of many with his two outstanding World Series performances, although one ended in disaster when he gave up four ninth-inning runs to lose 4-2. Substrack that one bad inning, and he gave up just one run in the 15th innings that were left. Left-hander Danny Jackson also started twice, with a 1-1 record and 1.69 ERA.

"I've always been a little hesitant when I've been asked about our pitching staff," Howser said. "But I can say now that I think we have the best staff in baseball. I think other teams will be comparing themselves to the Kansas City Royals next year."

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog agreed, to a point.

"They've got a good staff, but not that good," Herzog said. "If they did, they'd have won 130 games. We didn't play well. We didn't hit."

The playoff injury to Coleman, who stole 110 bases during the season, probably can be blamed for some of the Cardinals' lack of success at bat. "He is the one man; although his absence would have an effect on the rest of the players in the top part of the batting order."

Still, it can't explain the .154 average of No. 3 hitter Tommy Herr, who batted .302 in the season, the .070 average of Ozzie Smith, who was the MVP of the playoffs with a .435 average and the first left-handed home run of his career, or the .259 average of McRae, who won the NL batting crown with a .353 mark.

In fact, the only Cardinal with a batting average over .300 was Tito Landrum, the man who replaced Coleman and hit .360 in the Series. Veteran catcher Jim Sundberg was convinced the Royals' pitching staff had the potential to become one of the best ever, but even he realized that the real Cardinals hadn't shown themselves.

"With the ages of our pitchers, if they stay healthy, they should be great," he said. "They all have great heads. They're very disciplined, have great arms and they're gutsy. They should be great for a long time."

But in a way, he said, "I feel bad for the Cardinals. They're a good ballclub and people didn't get to see what kind of good hitting and running club they really are."

While the Cardinals were struggling at the plate, the Royals came alive offensively after a slow start. They wound up batting .288 as a team and averaged four runs a game, although 11 of them came in the deciding game.

"Our pitching staff has been outstanding," Saberhagen said, "but there is more to this club than pitching."

Frank White moved into the cleanup spot, becoming the first second baseman since Jackie Robinson in 1952 to hit fourth in a World Series. Although White hit only .250, he led the club with six RBIs and four extra-base hits, including a homer.

Brett hit .370, with four hits in Game 7, but still he only drove in one run and had only one extra-base hit.

Missing Coleman doomed Cards, say shell-shocked St. Louis players

By PAUL LeBAR
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — An offensive collapse by the St. Louis Cardinals in a World Series they were supposed to have won may, in retrospect, have been inevitable because of the absence of injured Vince Coleman, first baseman-freak Clark said Monday.

"He is a big part of this team. He stole 110 bases. We've got a team where someone has got to make it happen," Clark said of Coleman's absence. "We got away with it for a while, but it caught up with us. Guys started getting out of themselves and out of their own game. We couldn't put the pieces of the puzzle together."

Clark's claim that St. Louis' failure against the Kansas City Royals in the World Series was not the same team that during the regular season led the National League in hitting and run production was difficult to dispute. The Cardinals hit .264 and scored at a pace of more than four runs a game. Against Kansas City they hit .185, the lowest ever by a team in a seven-game Series, and manufactured only 113 runs.

"It's a reflection of our poor hitting and their good pitching," St. Louis outfielder Andy Van Slyke said in the aftermath of the Cards' 11-0 shellacking Sunday night in Game 7. "I know from our scouting reports that they had good pitching, and we knew that whoever got the best pitching was going to win," Van Slyke said. "We just felt that our bats were better than their bats. It's crazy."

Given by John Tudor as the cause for St. Louis' demise was the disputed call at first base that sparked the Royals' 2-1 victory in Game 6.

"I think we lost that game on what was a bad call. But that had nothing to do with what happened tonight," said Tudor after bearing the brunt of Kansas City's final game assault. "It all came down to one ballgame. Tonight they were a better ballclub than we were."

VINCE COLEMAN
Catalyst

Cards Manager Whitey Herzog, who a few years ago steered Kansas City to three straight American League playoffs, acknowledged as much, albeit grudgingly.

"I'm not taking anything away from them, but I don't think they could win our (NL East) division," Herzog said. "We led the league in hits, runs scored, but over the last month we didn't hit. When a team gets in a slump, there is nothing you can do."

Herzog, as his team was taking its licks, went to the rescue of pitcher Joaquin Andujar during a fifth-inning dispute with plate umpire Don Denkinger over a pitch called a ball.

The ruckus with the same American League umpire, who a year earlier made the controversial call at first base, produced results that were predictable. Herzog became the first Series manager who ejected since Billy Martin of the New York Yankees in 1976. One batter later, Andujar also received the heave-ho as the first player to be ejected since Clay Carroll of the Cincinnati Reds in 1970.

Afterward, in explaining the temperamental outburst that precipitated Andujar's banishment as the pitcher was being physically restrained by teammate Terry Pendleton and St. Louis coaches Hal Lanier and Nick Leyva, the manager came to the Cards 21-game winner's defense.

"He's just been upset because he has only won one game over the last couple of months. Andujar was calling for (catcher Darrell) Porter, and (Denkinger) got involved," Herzog said. "I was frustrated, too. I didn't mind getting thrown out. I'd seen enough."

St. Louis outfielder Tito Landrum said he hoped the images of the ugly fifth-inning scenes would not be those baseball fans would remember most about his team.

"I'm still proud to be a part of the St. Louis Cardinals, but it's unfortunate pent-up emotions were released," Landrum said.

Tudor, who uncouthly walked four batters and yielded three Royals hits that included Darryl Motley's two-run homer in only 25 innings, also vented his anger after leaving by hitting an electric fan in St. Louis' clubhouse.

"What happened was a stupid mistake on my part. I'm quite aware of that," said Tudor, whose cut in his left index finger required stitches. "I'm down right now, but hopefully it will wear off in a few days. It wasn't our time to win a ballgame."

Herzog, like Clark, pointed to the fresh knee injury suffered by Coleman when caught in a mechanical tarp during the NL playoffs as probably the Cards' most crushing blow, but did not all but their loss.

"In a seven-game Series, I don't want to say he was a reason, we didn't get the championship. We didn't get into our game plan at all," Herzog said.

Nixon awards umpires extra 40 percent for 7-game LCS

By MIKE HARRIS
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Former President Richard M. Nixon, acting as an arbitrator, decided Monday that major league umpires will receive a 40 percent increase in pay for working additional baseball games in the two divisional championship series.

Baseball

Nixon, chosen by the presidents of the two leagues to decide the dispute between baseball and the umpires in binding arbitration, said in a statement, "The arbitrator's decision is that because the championship series have been expanded by a factor of 40 percent, the working umpires are entitled to receive a 40 percent increase in compensation, which amounts to an increase of $4,000 per umpire, or a total of $48,000 per year for the 12 working umpires for the years 1985 and 1986."

The American and National league playoffs were expanded from best-of-5 to best-of-7, beginning in 1985. The umpires threatened a strike, but later agreed to the arbitration by Nixon.

The statement by Nixon also said that only the working umpires will receive additional compensation for 1985, but that for 1986, an "additional 40 percent increase in the League Championship Series justifies a 40 percent increase in the contribution the leagues should make to the pool for all 60 of the umpires."

That additional amount for 1986 will be $64,000, Nixon said.

For the years 1984-86, the current agreement between the leagues and the umpires calls for each umpire working the league playoffs to receive $10,000. Nixon said that amount will be increased to $14,000 apiece for next year.

RICHARD NIXON
Decision binding

Nixon also made some suggestions to the umpires and the leagues about future negotiations, saying, in part: "Issues such as whether the pool concept should be permanently adopted and how this might bear on the current debate over which umpires should be assigned to championship events should be thoroughly considered and resolved when the umpires and the leagues negotiate a new contract in 1986."

"The goal of both parties should be to negotiate a long-term contract which is generous to the umpires and consistent with the financial capability of the owners."

The contract might well be indexed for cost-of-living increases due to inflation and contain a provision for binding arbitration in the event of disputes about the terms of the contract in the future. In concluding the eight-page decision, referring to his thoughts about future negotiations, Nixon said: "These suggestions are in no way binding on either the leagues or the umpires. But in view of the fact that baseball is not only now America's national game, but is becoming the national game in many other countries as well, it is vitally important that because of the umpires' special relation to the game, they and the leagues negotiate a contract which sets a special standard for responsibility and one in which a work stoppage would be a last resort."

Nixon, who said he is a lifelong baseball fan, was not present when his statement was distributed to the media.

There was no immediate response to Nixon's decision from league presidents, Bobby Brown of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League, both of whom were traveling Monday on the way home from the World Series.

Richie Phillips, head of the umpires union, said from Philadelphia, "President Nixon's decision represents another significant advance for the umpires. The total award, which is almost three times the league's final offer, provides additional compensation for the umpires who work the LCS (League Championship Series) and, more importantly, represents a recognition of the special events pool as a continued element of umpire compensation."

Under the current agreement, the umpires earn $2,500 apiece for working the All-Star Game and $15,000 each for working the World Series. The overall special events pool for 1985 divided equally among all 60 major league umpires, was $240,000. The 1986 amount was set at $300,000 prior to Nixon's decision.

Series

a double. But Lonnie Smith contributed four RBI while hitting .323 and Willie Wilson had three RBI and a .367 average.

And, in the final game, the Royals demolished the Cardinals' best pitcher, Tudor, who already had won Games 1 and 4. Tudor lasted only 2-3 innings, giving up five runs on three hits and four uncharacteristic walks in his shortest outing of the year.

"Some of the guys said they dreamed about facing Tudor and didn't sleep much the night before," Lonnie Smith said. "But when they got to the ballpark, they went out and did it. We kept saying, 'We'll have to do it like we did in Toronto, and I think it gives us a little more satisfaction to come from behind like that.'"

Even Blacutan pitched in with a couple of RBI and an average of .278 — 1989 points above his season average of .189.

The Cardinals' lack of running probably can be explained in three parts. First, and most obvious, Coleman didn't play. Second, the Royals threw three left-handed starters at St. Louis and all three times the Cards were caught stealing, were actually pickoffs. And third, the Royals broke on top in five of the seven games, taking away many potential opportunities.

"The total ineptitude of Andujar, who won 21 games is more difficult to understand. In the Cardinals' 1982 World Series victory over Milwaukee, Andujar won two games, so it wasn't lack of experience in pressure situations. Andujar claimed it was due in part to the American League umpires."

In his only start, in Game 3, Andujar had Jim McKean of the American League behind the plate. Andujar lasted four innings, giving up four runs on nine hits, and claim McKean wouldn't give him a call strike.

In Game 7, the AL's Don Denkinger was behind the plate when Andujar came in for a very brief stint. In the Royals' six-run fifth inning, he pitched to two batters, giving up a hit to White and walking Sundberg, this time complaining that Denkinger couldn't call strikes.

With Andujar, one never knows. The belief, however, was that when Andujar got mad, which was often, he tried to challenge hitters with fastballs down the middle — with catastrophic results.

In any case, his inability to pitch had a devastating effect on the Cardinals' starting staff because when Bob Forsch took his turn in the rotation in Game 5, he lasted only 1 1/2 innings, giving up four runs on five hits.

"We led the league in hits and runs scored, but over the last month, we didn't," Herzog said. "When a team gets in a slump, there is nothing you can do. I guess when you look at it, we were pretty fortunate to win three games."

"I'm not taking anything away from them (the Royals), but I do think they could have won our division," Herzog said. "But they're the champions and I tip my hat to them."

Schnellenberger: Winning beats rebuilding

By JANE GIBSON
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Howard Schnellenberger believes he should be allowed one losing season while rebuilding the University of Louisville's football program. He will probably get it.

College football

Midway through his first year, he already has endured his worst loss as a college coach and watched the Cardinals give up more than 600 yards in two games.

He sours when pressed on the importance of a winning record, but he also notes that it takes time to craft a competitive team.

"It took Indiana 16 games in a row to get a victory," he said. "Kentucky was 0-10-1 Jerry Claiborne's first year. Charley Pell, when he took over at Florida, he didn't win a game his first year, he was 0-40-1. "But look what we've done since then. Kentucky's gone to a bowl for two years. Indiana is 4-0. Florida is ranked in the Top 20." And Miami, Fla., 5-6 his first year under Schnellenberger, won the national championship in 1983. Schnellenberger brought a miracle-worker image to Louisville last September, though he never promised immediate results. Despite the Cardinals' 1-4 record entering Saturday's game with Southern Mississippi, he seems content with the progress made so far.

H. SCHNELLENBERGER
One bad season?

"We are two years behind what I found at Miami," Schnellenberger said in a recent interview. "I committed myself to building a program. I'm not going to change my objective after five games."

"I'm disappointed, not frustrated. We didn't play as well as we can play. The young players have no precedent to fall back on to overcome early adversities and bounce back."

Schnellenberger isn't accustomed to losing. As an assistant coach, his professional and college teams went 129-29-10. At Miami, he had a 41-16 record in five seasons as head coach. Louisville, which hasn't had a winning season since 1978, handed Schnellenberger his worst loss as a college coach when Syracuse whipped it 48-0.

Other low points include allowing Houston 671 yards and 49 points, and giving up 627 yards to Indiana in a 41-28 loss.

Schnellenberger has become irritated at postgame news conferences when talk turned to wins and losses, dismissing the subject with "they don't matter; only to shallow-thinking people."

"This is the most difficult thing any coach has ever attempted," he said of his decision to join the Cards, a choice that meant turning down offers from major college teams and the pros.

There have been high points. Schnellenberger, for example, has as well as new practice fields and a new weight room. Meanwhile, inquiries from high school football players have increased.

"There is no pressure on me now. Maybe in a few years down the road, but this isn't pressure. Pressure is when you're in the Orange Bowl championship," Schnellenberger said.

"I have no guarantee we'll get better. I hope we will and I see some excellent young players that will develop in the future."

Schnellenberger maintains that no matter how Louisville finishes the season, his reputation as a top-flight coach won't be tarnished.

"I have no control over my reputation. I think people assume I'm a good coach, and I am," he said. "I don't think losses the first year of a rebuilding program diminish reputations. It can serve to build them if the teams come back the next year."

ISU rekindles football race in Big Sky

By The Associated Press

It was one of those rare college football games that live up to the pre-game hype. But it's the low expectations get skewed by perspective.

For Idaho State coach Jim Koetter, his Bengals' stunning 38-37 victory over arch-rival Idaho was "one of the better games I've been involved with." It surpassed all his expectations.

But Saturday's game must have been seen somewhat differently by Idaho coach Dennis Erickson. He must have clenched his teeth hard as with 33 seconds left, he watched his "Vandals" No. 4 ranking in the NCAA Division I-AA, and more importantly, their place alone atop the Big Sky Conference, flutter away like quarters back Rick Sloan's pass into the arms of an ISU defender as the clock ran down.

But he put on a brave face. "We're still in control of our destiny," Erickson said hopefully after the game. "It's right where we'd figure it'd be."

But could anyone have figured that the Big Sky race, with just four weeks left, would look like a Friday night vodka line in downtown Moscow?

It took a 76-yard touchdown pass from the prolific Vern Harris to the seldom-used Butch Caston to do it, but Idaho State, now 5-2 for the season and 3-1 in the conference, tied a neat knot atop the Big Sky Conference.

At 4-1 in the league and 6-2 overall and with only Montana State and Boise State left to face Idaho undoubtedly has the inside track toward emerging from the four-way tie. But in this league, this year, you can't count on anyone above 500.

Saturday's Idaho-Idaho State game at the ISU Minidome was about as close to Roman spectacle as football gets in this neck of the woods. The teams came into the game ranked first and second in Division I-AA in total offense. That shouldn't change much as the Vandals racked up 509 total yards and the Bengals added 486. Sloan's pass into the arms of an ISU defender as the clock ran down.

Nearly overlooked in that blizzard of passing and rushing was a new Big Sky and Division I-AA record for consecutive field goals. But as Idaho's freshman kicker Brian Decleio booted his 13th straight through the uprights, little did he know his performance would be remembered instead for what he failed to do.

Decleio missed his sixth extra point of the season after the Vandals' final touchdown, the one that seemed to seal ISU's fate. It wasn't to be.

Boise State coach Lyle Setencich knows the feeling. More than a few times in the past three years his teams have lost close games thanks to his kicking game, or lack thereof.

But on Saturday luck was with the Broncos. They used a tipped pass into the hands of defensive back Maury Moore to set up a last-second, 26-yard field goal by kicker Roberto Moran, and a 24-21 victory over Weber State.

"It's about time we won one like this," Setencich said as Boise State stayed in the Big Sky hunt at 3-1, 4-3 overall.

Moran, however, would rather that the needed points had come about two minutes earlier, when he missed a 27-yard field goal attempt.

"There was no way I am going to miss the second one," he said.

The loss dropped Weber to 1-3 in the league and 3-4 on the season, deep in the mire of four teams with a single Big Sky win each.

Near the bottom of that pile is Northern Arizona at 1-4 against conference opponents and 3-5 overall. The Lumberjacks found themselves shoved further down over the weekend with a 36-10 thumping at the hands of 4-1, 7-1 Nevada-Reno.

And while some other coaches were sweating bullets over their kicking games, Wolf Peck coach Chris Auti had things well in hand. Marty Zendejas made five field goals to tie Big Sky and Division I-AA records, including the fourth time in history that many three-pointers have been made against the Axers.

"The kicking game was good," Auti said with typical understatement. "We had not needed to use it much this season. But when we asked Zendejas to do it, he got the job done."

Montana coach Larry Donovan couldn't get his job done Saturday as his Grizzlies fell to 1-3 and 2-5 with perhaps the most damaging loss of a long and troublesome season.

In-state rival Montana State won the battle for bragging rights with a 41-18 victory that broke a five-game losing streak and gave coach Dave Arnold plenty of reason to show his teeth.

"It's been a long time between smiles this season," Arnold said. "But this was a big game, and I've got a pretty big smile."

"He'd better enjoy it while it lasts."

The Bobcats are only 1-4 in the Big Sky and 2-6 overall, and still must face Nevada-Reno, Idaho and Washington State.

Defense almost is getting to be an endangered species among this season's Big Sky teams.

Consider this: Weber State is averaging 459 yards per game. That's fifth in the nation among Division I-AA teams — but just fourth in the Big Sky.

Conference teams rank 1-2-3 in total offense nationally, headed by Idaho's 495-yard average. Idaho State is right behind, 488 yards per game, and Nevada-Reno holds down third at 473.

Perhaps because of the high-powered offenses, Big Sky schools have little national ranking on defense. Idaho State ranks 13th nationally, tops in the Big Sky, allowing an average of 287 yards per game. Nevada-Reno is second in the Big Sky, 26th nationally, at 304 yards per game.

Eric Beavers of Nevada-Reno continues to top Big Sky quarterbacks in passing, with an NCAA rating of 143 based on 141 completions in 233 attempts, 1,859 yards and 17 touchdown passes compared with 10 interceptions.

Next is ISU's Vern Harris, who has the most yards, 1,972, 16 TD passes and a 133.8 rating.

His replacement, Rick Sloan, has an NCAA rating of 155 but doesn't have enough pass attempts to rank.

Charvez Foger of Reno is making a runaway of the rushing contest. Foger has gained 898 yards, averaging 128 per game.

Harris, Hoge named BSC's players of week

BOISE (AP) — Idaho State quarterback Vern Harris, ISU running back Merrill Hoge and Montana State linebacker Kirk Timmer have been named the Big Sky Conference football players of the week, league Commissioner Ron Stephenson said.

Harris and Hoge shared the award on offense and Timmer was honored on defense, Stephenson said.

Harris, a 6-foot 1-inch, 196-pound senior from LaMirada, Calif., guided the Bengals to a thrilling come-from-behind 38-37 victory over in-state rival Idaho.

Harris hooked up with Butch Caston with 24 seconds left in the game on a 76-yard scoring bomb to tie the score and set up the winning point-after kick just seconds after Idaho had taken a 37-31 lead.

He completed 21 of 33 passes for 301 yards and two touchdowns.

Hoge, a 6-2, 220-pound junior from Pocatello, was the workhorse in the Idaho State offense. He had 213 yards in all purpose running, including 21 rushing attempts for 120 yards and three touchdowns.

BYU falls to 17 in college football poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
The Associated Press

Iowa remained a unanimous No. 1 as the nation's top college football team for the second week in a row Monday while defending national champion Brigham Young suffered its second loss of the season and skidded from seventh place to 17th.

The 7-0 Hawkeyes, 19-0 winners over Northwestern, received all 58 first-place votes and a perfect 1,100 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the Associated Press poll.

Over the last 13 years, the only other team to be voted a unanimous

No. 1 for two consecutive weeks as Nebraska early in the 1983 season.

The first six teams all held onto their spots from last week. Runner-up Florida, a 35-18 winner over Virginia Tech, received 1,060 points while Penn State blanked West Virginia 27-0 and totaled 1,025 points.

Fourth-ranked Michigan received 994 points after trouncing Indiana 42-15. No. 5 Nebraska downed Colorado 17-7 and received 912 points and sixth-ranked Auburn turned back Mississippi State 21-9 for 866 points.

BYU's stunning 23-16 loss to previously winless Texas-E Paso dropped the Cougars 10 places in the rankings. Meanwhile, Air Force, another Western Athletic Conference team, climbed from eighth to seventh with 764 points by defeating Utah 32-15.

LEGAL NOTICE

to talk to a lawyer and the court will appoint one for you if you cannot.

3. Your lawyer can talk at the social and legal issues of the case, tell you about the law, help you understand your rights and help you.

Dated October 9, 1985 By direction of the Honorable James B. Mitchell, Judge/Commissioner, Twin Falls County, Idaho, by Cindy Warneka, Deputy Clerk.

PUBLISH: Tuesdays, October 15, 22, and 29, 1985.

LEGAL NOTICE
The South-Central Private Industry Council, Inc., pursuant to the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), is hereby issuing a Request for Proposals (RFP) for the funding of Title II-A projects in southeastern Idaho.

Successful bidders shall operate employment and training programs from July 1, 1986 through June 30, 1987.

Estimated funding available through this initiative is $650,000-$725,000.

To obtain further information and a RFP packet, interested persons or organizations should contact: Robert W. Lundgren, SCIP Coordinator, 1300 Kimberly Road, P.O. Box 1844, Twin Falls, Idaho 83403, Telephone: (208) 734-6588. Deadline for submission of this RFP is December 31, 1985.

PUBLISH: Tuesday, October 29, Wednesday, October 30, and Thursday, October 31, 1985.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
GIVEN BY THE Planning and Zoning Commission, City of Twin Falls, Idaho, that a Public Hearing will be held upon the following described property: Approximately 16.48 acres located in Sections 15 and 22, Township 10 South, Range 15 East, B.M. Also known as being located 3 miles South and 1 mile South of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, upon said request.

The intended use is to divide off approximately 3.65 acres which is the homestead, and to sell the farm as Mr. Allen plans to retire.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that a Public Hearing will be held before the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission, on the 14th day of November, 1985, in the County of Idaho, at the Building, Twin Falls, Idaho upon said request.

Any and all persons interested may appear at said hearing and register their approval or disapproval of the matter stated above or may file their written comments to said request at the Office of the Zoning Administrator, 634 Addison Avenue West, Twin Falls, Idaho, before said hearing.

On the 24th day of October, 1985, Robert A. Pettygrove, Chairman

Business productivity rises

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The productivity of U.S. businesses rose at a 1.2 percent annual rate during the summer while major bargaining contracts this year have contained the smallest wage increases on record, the government said Monday.

Private analysts said the two Labor Department reports painted a picture of an economy where consumers are getting a price break, but it is coming at the expense of a beating inflicted on U.S. industries at the hands of foreign competition.

The Labor Department said the 1.2 percent increase at an annual rate in the productivity of non-farm businesses during the July-September quarter matched the advance recorded from April through June. Both quarters showed a significant improvement from a 3.1 percent decline in productivity suffered in the first quarter this year.

The increase in productivity came from a 3.2 percent advance in output while the hours worked by employees was rising by 2 percent. Productivity is a measure of output per hours worked.

"These changes along with salary adjustments left the unit labor cost — the amount of compensation per unit of output — rising at an annual rate of 2.7 percent in the July-September quarter, only a slight advance from a 2.1 percent rate of increase in the second quarter."

Unit labor costs went up at an even slower 0.5 rate in the U.S. manufacturing sector in the July-September period, according to the report. A second Labor Department report said that major collective bargaining agreements reached during the first nine months of this year provided for annual wage adjustments of 2.3 percent in the first year of the contract.

This gain was the lowest increase since the Labor Department began surveying major collective bargaining agreements in 1962.

Analysts said the remarkably low wage increases were a reflection of the stiff competition U.S. industries have faced all year long from foreign producers.

"These reports suggest that we will continue to have low inflation because of the squeeze on the industrial side of the economy," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson, Lehman Brothers. "There is no other choice for American business but to squeeze as much productivity as possible from the labor force and to keep a downward pressure on prices."

Sinai said the manufacturing sector, which has lost 340,000 jobs since the first of the year, was likely to suffer more layoffs in coming months.

While the flood of foreign imports has hurt U.S. producers, consumers are benefiting from the price competition. Sinai said the low growth in wage settlements and in unit labor costs was a sign that inflation will remain at low levels next year.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the productivity report showed "our economic future is bright." He said that "strong growth in productivity almost always accompanies gross national product expansion, and we continue to look for a strong fourth quarter."

The report on union contracts said that the settlements reached so far this year called for a first-year salary increase of 2.3 percent and an annual increase over the life of the contract of 2.7 percent.

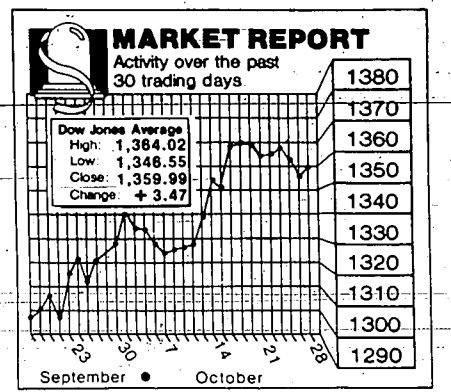

"This compares with increases of 3.8 percent for the first year and annual increases of 3.4 percent the last time these parties bargained, the department said. The survey covers industries employing 7 million workers in bargaining units with at least 100 workers."

David Ernst, an economist with Evans Economics, a Washington consulting firm, said the recently settled strike for higher wages at Chrysler Corporation could mean that unions are getting more militant.

"I think a lot of workers feel that it is now time for them to get something back for their sacrifices," he said. "I don't think we will go back to the huge salary increases of the late 1970s, but I think we will begin to see somewhat higher wage settlements."

However, David Berson, an economist at Wharton Economics, said he saw no evidence that union salary demands would begin to escalate.

"Because of the foreign competition, domestic workers are simply going to be unable to increase their wages very significantly," he said.

Blue-chips rally to ward off losses

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market bounced back from a round of morning selling to finish mixed Monday, thanks to some buying of blue-chip issues near the close.

The late upswing came in spite of general uneasiness about the outlook for interest rates.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to 97.48 million shares from 101.81 million Friday.

Rates rose in the bond market as traders looked ahead to a backlog of new government securities that has built up while Congress struggles to agree on legislation raising the Treasury's debt ceiling.

There was concern on Wall Street that U.S. rates might have to rise to stay competitive with rates in Japan, which have taken a jump in recent days.

Higher rates would stand as an obstacle to revived growth in the domestic economy. At the same time, they would make interest-bearing investments more attractive, thus in competition to stocks.

News of stepped-up progress in the House Ways and Means Committee over the weekend toward tax reform legislation appeared to have little impact on the market.

Texas Instruments dropped 2 1/2 to 90 1/2. Late Friday the company reported an $82.8 million loss for the third quarter, and said it would lay off 2,200 workers and close some plants as a result of the continuing slump in the semiconductor business.

UAL, which reported that its third-quarter earnings declined to 46 cents a share from $1.75 in the comparable period last year, slumped 1 1/2 to 46. Among other leading airline issuers, Delta Air Lines slipped 3/4 to 37 1/2; AMR was down 1/2 to 38 1/2; and Eastern lost 1/4 to 67 1/2.

Wheeler Stores tumbled 1 1/2 to 10 1/2. The company said it had dropped its plans to be acquired by an investor group that included several executives in the retailing industry.

Texas Oil & Gas fell 1 1/8 to 18 and U.S. Steel was up 1/4 to 28 1/4. U.S. Steel said Friday it was engaged in talks toward a possible acquisition of Texas Oil & Gas.

Brooklyn Union Gas rose 1 1/2 to 41 1/2, on word of the company's plans for a 2-for-1 stock split and a dividend increase.

In the overall count on the Big Board, about seven issues declined in price for every six that gained ground. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .05 to 100.42.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 121.77 million shares.

Sale reduces debt
PHOENIX — Cirlco K Corp. has completed selling $125 million worth of 12.75 percent senior subordinated debentures, company officials announced.

Chairman Karl Eller said the proceeds will be used to reduce $100 million worth of long-term debt, as well as for working capital and reductions in short-term debt.

Cirlco K operates 3,155 convenience stores in 23 Western, Southern and Southeastern states.

Ford says low-interest deals to blame for drop in profits

By TIM BOVEE
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Ford Motor Co. third-quarter profits were 17.5 percent below a year ago because of low-cost financing incentives and a two-week strike, the nation's second-largest automaker said.

Ford reported net income of $313.1 million, or $1.70 per share, in the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with $379.7 million, or $2.05 per share, in the same period last year.

Gary Glazer, an automotive analyst with First Boston Corp., a New York brokerage house, said the earnings were strong "given that Ford took a strike at the Lorain, Ohio (assembly) plant in the third quarter and also incurred a very high level of marketing costs due to the aggressive third-quarter sales incentives program."

Ford said shutdowns at model changeover plants also cut into profits.

The U.S.-based automakers, including Ford through its Ford Motor Credit Co. subsidiary, offered credit financing of less than 8 percent near the end of the quarter to clear dealer showrooms of 1985 models.

David Healy, automotive analyst with New York's Drexel Burnham Lambert, estimated the specials cost Ford from 50 cents to 75 cents per share in profit, or more than $90 million.

He estimated the Lorain strike in September cost Ford an additional 20 cents to 25 cents per share in profit, or more than $25 million.

Ford was the second of the Big Three automakers to release third-quarter financial results.

General Motors Corp., the nation's largest automaker, this past Tuesday reported profit of $516.5 million, a 24 percent gain from a year earlier. GM reported a $20.9 million loss on its car-making operations.

Chrysler Corp. said it planned to release its results Monday.

Ford reported $155.2 million in income from its car-making operations, less than half the $362.7 million in operating income received in the year-ago quarter.

Third-quarter sales totaled $11.6 billion, down 2 percent from $11.8 billion in the year-ago period, Ford said.

Retail sales, however, strengthened as U.S. dealers delivered 19 percent more cars and trucks during the third quarter than during the comparable period a year ago.

Ford Chairman Donald E. Petersen and President Harold A. Poling said in a joint statement.

Joseph Phillippi, auto analyst with E.F. Hutton in New York, said sales figures were affected by the discount financing.

"When they calculate sales and revenues, they in effect have to discount the cars to Ford Motor Credit for the discount financing program, so that will affect the sales numbers," he said.

"Sales go down, and what appears to be the cost of goods goes up substantially, but that's just because the net sales number, after discounts, is a lot lower than if you didn't have these cheap financing programs," Phillippi said.

Ford's lending subsidiary reported net income of $96 million in the third quarter, up 17 percent from the year-ago period.

For the first nine months of this year, Ford had net income of $1.8 billion, or $9.67 per share, down 18 percent from $2.2 billion, or $11.90 per share, in the similar period last year.

Sales for the first three quarters totaled $33.7 billion, down 0.7 percent from $33.9 billion in the year-ago period.

Ford ended the quarter with $5.9 billion in cash and marketable securities, compared with $5.3 billion at the end of the second quarter.

Worldwide, Ford sold 1,241,119 cars and trucks in the third quarter, down from 1,260,033 a year ago.

The company said its domestic market share was 19.7 percent, up 0.4 percent from the third quarter of 1984.

Mining firm rebounds, nets profit

WALLACE (AP) — Hecla Mining Co. reported unaudited net income for the third quarter of 1985 at $790,000, or 3 cents per share.

This compared with a loss approaching $11.8 million, or 44 cents per share, in the third quarter of last year.

The company noted that the 1984 results were distorted due to expenses related to the acquisition of Rancocas Exploration and Development Corp.

For the first 9 months of 1985, Hecla reported a loss of $348,000, or 1 cent per share, in cyclical precious metal prices.

For the same period of last year, the Wallace-based mining firm said it had a profit of $16.3 million, or 60 cents per share.

"Although Hecla enjoys the benefits of diversification into industrial minerals, we continue to ride out what we perceive to be a trough in cyclical precious metal prices," the company said.

"We will be in a strong position to take advantage of the upturn when it comes," company president William A. Griffith told stockholders.

Business author picks U.S. 'hot spots'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The best places to start businesses in the United States are "nourishing to entrepreneurs" and are in the industrial North as well as the South and west, according to a new book by author John Naisbitt says.

Naisbitt, known for his best-selling book "Megatrends," this past week released his list of the 10 hottest places for starting businesses and creating jobs in what he calls the "new information, electronic, service economy."

The cities and states were in alphabetical order, with no attempt to rank among the top 10. The list, and some of the reasons he cited:

• Ann Arbor, Mich.: Becoming a center for development of robotics and "richly symbolic" because of nearby Detroit's continued dependence on the automobile industry.

• Atlanta: Becoming "a global city" with good air connections and a center for international trade.

• Connecticut: "Connecticut really stands for small business."

• Indiana: "Tremendous public-private cooperation."

• Massachusetts: Following Boston to high technology. He said New England is becoming one of the nation's most prosperous regions.

• Mesa, Ariz.: "Great quality of life" and becoming a center for tourism, retailing and technology.

• Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.: High marks for public-private cooperation and for high technology businesses that encourage entrepreneurship from within.

—San Antonio, Texas: "Very progressive." "It's thinking very much like a global city," and with Austin part of a growing region.

• San Diego: High quality of life and strong growth of high-tech companies.

• Tampa, Fla.: Port to the Caribbean and major research and development center, with neighboring St. Petersburg.

—These 10 places are very nourishing to entrepreneurs," said Naisbitt, adding that they also provide financial aid to small businesses. "The entrepreneur is emerging as the new hero in this economy."

He said the shift in the national economic base is underscored by the 700,000 new jobs that were created last year and an even larger number early by the end of this year. The last time such large numbers of new jobs were created, he said, was when the nation shifted from an agrarian to industrial base.

Many of the cities on the list are medium-sized, which Naisbitt said in many cases makes for higher quality of life for more people than in crowded big cities.

With heavy industry as the economy's engine, companies looked for infrastructure — rivers, roads, railways, energy sources — in deciding where to locate, he said. But with technology and information driving the economy, he said, managers are more interested in quality of life in deciding where to locate.

"What's exciting," he said, "is it's not Sunbelt wall-to-wall. Industrial America is moving to the new information economy."

Naisbitt said there are many other areas where the new small businesses flourish. He named as the also-rans: Raleigh, N.C.; Loudoun County, Va.; Sarasota, Fla.; San Jose, Calif.; and Vermont and New Hampshire.

Humidifiers benefit health, guard furniture, cut heat cost

At least four years ago, we bought humidifiers for every room in our New York City apartment to protect our piano and other precious furniture from being dried out during the winter months and to protect our lungs as well.

We had no thought at the time of reducing our heating costs, and the furniture we were guarding was hardly in the "antique" class. We were warned by experts: we accepted the warning; we acted; and that has been that.

Now, I've just learned that consumer interest in humidifiers is moving ever higher. More than 500 million consumers spent about $50 million in 1984 for humidifiers, and this year manufacturers expect to sell units to about 600,000 consumers.

Interest in the machines is at its highest during the winter months, reports Michael Murphy, head of marketing of Ultrasonic humidifiers for Toshiba America.

With two directionally adjustable nozzles and a large water reservoir, an ultrasonic humidifier releases a cool mist into the air. Your throat won't feel like sandpaper as the humidifier begins to add moisture to the room. You are more comfortable as the humidity reaches the desired level.

Since the first oil embargo, consumers have been looking for ways humidifier, particularly an ultrasonic model, is a sound investment. Without even being aware of it, we made a purchase way ahead of its time.

to heat and to retain the heat in their homes. Weather stripping rolls out by the yard as we try to stymie the escape of heat through walls, ceilings, window cracks and door jams. While we turn to these steps to avoid loss of heat, our homes become dry and a humidifier will add comfortable moisture to the air. Your thermostat can be set at a slightly lower temperature, resulting in lower monthly heating bills.

Maintaining a level of humidity that is fairly constant can help preserve your paintings. Neither paint nor canvas can endure extreme dryness without some damage, say art experts. Also, today's highly decorative furniture can fall victim to a room's dry air, with veneer cracking or lifting from its once secure position.

An item that might represent an investment of thousands of dollars can be guarded against destruction in a room with a humidifier.

A comfortable level of humidity is also vitally important for health reasons. This is especially true during the flu season, which is coming reaches a selected level. It also must be free of bells, drums or filters to allow for easy cleaning.

The benefits are obvious. A

Albertson's head to receive honor

POCATELLO (API) — The chairman and chief executive officer of Albertson's Inc. has been chosen Idaho businessman of the year by the Idaho State University chapter of a national professional business fraternity.

Warren McCain will be honored at a dinner in Pocatello on Nov. 7. The event will feature an address from former governor and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, who is expected to run again for governor in 1996.

The Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity said it was recognizing McCain for his consistent record of outstanding business, professional and community accomplishments.

Official says forest industry will survive

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Depriving American builders of the abundant supply of underpriced Canadian lumber would add only an insignificant amount to the cost of a new home, but could save thousands of Idaho jobs, says a forest products industry spokesman.

"The forest products industry may be slightly ill, but we will recover," said Tom Richards, president of Idaho Forest Industries, Coeur d'Alene.

Richards was a panelist at the State Housing Conference here Friday, talking about what it will take for the state's homebuilding and timber industries to recover.

There are 200 timber plants in Idaho, Richards said, with 13,000 to 20,000 jobs depending on what cycle they're in.

Canadian lumber is taking up to 35 percent of the market in the United States, he said, and obviously builders prefer to buy less expensive timber if it's available.

Depriving a builder of the low-cost Canadian timber will drive prices up, perhaps $30 per thousand board feet, he said. That could add up to $300 to the cost of a new home — less than one-half of one percent.

"In Idaho, that would mean the return of thousands of jobs," he said.

Pocatello businessman Park Price said Idaho should seek to attract small companies, since 96 percent of all state businesses employ less than 50 workers.

Idaho has a lot to offer, he said, but has two major drawbacks, its lack of local services and education.

He said studies in other states indicate that high taxes won't drive prospective employers out — but a bad educational system and a lack of services will. "We will lose out if we don't have the services," he said.

Nampa Mayor Winston Goering suggested more emphasis on loans and financing for home improvement projects. He said cities such as his need to work hard at filling in vacant areas of the city.

And Goering said he'd like to see some program to help local government remove substandard housing and replace it with better facilities.

Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Preston, assistant majority leader in that chamber, said given Idaho's circumstances, there should be no major change in the tax base and no increase in taxes.

Geddes said he's going to press Gov. John Evans to launch a campaign to get people to buy Idaho products, or those made in this country in preference to foreign imports.

Senate Minority Leader Kermit Kiebert, D-Idaho, said the failure of so many school tax override issues this year indicates people are tired of higher property taxes.

He said the next Legislature will have to look at alternative ways of raising tax revenue. "The next session may have an opportunity to vote on some of those changes," he said.

A true matchmaker

Irish reverend marries 17,000 in 35 years

By CYNTHIA TAGGART
The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — The Coeur d'Amour is no more.

In the past 35 years, the Coeur d'Alene marriage institution has housed the weddings of salt-crusted brides and uniformed sailors, brides and grooms wearing matching love beads, stiffly tuxedoed men and women wrapped in yards of chiffon.

But now the block around the building has been razed, its water system has been removed, and the Coeur d'Amour is tilted to the side.

The tiny, Irish-born Rev. Victoria Canbury, who performed more than 17,000 weddings there, has not, however, relegated her silver and satin decorations to the cedar chest.

She simply has moved her marriage ceremonies into the Chapel in the Garden, which she has run as the Church of Ireland for 35 years.

"I had third-generation children calling me to file out if I could marry them like I did their parents and grandparents before them," Mrs. Canbury said.

At 85, she still boasts the white-blond curls and energetic blue eyes of a child. Her voice filled the chapel with a touch of her faraway Irish homeland.

"I was so stunned when I went to the (wedding) chapel on Monday, after leaving Saturday night as usual, and all the houses on the block went gone but that," Mrs. Canbury said.

She doesn't remember official notification that the block was to be cleared or that she should prepare to move.

Properly part-owner Dan Williams, of D.E.L. Developers, aid he never thought "it necessary to tell Mrs. Canbury anything."

"Our intention was to clear away the Cottage Court (rental cottages) and leave the chapel as a landmark, so there was nothing to tell her," Williams said of the June incident.

The developer's agreement with the city required the water system to be removed with the cottages. Williams said city records showed the chapel had a separate water system that would allow it to function once the other cottages were removed.

In the midst of destruction, however, workers found the chapel was on the same water system and removed all pipes.

When Williams asked city officials if he could reconstruct the water

Rev. Victoria Canbury stands in front of her Garden Chapel, where she still marries couples system to the chapel, he said he was told the chapel had to meet the fire code standards first.

"We felt they (Coeur d'Amour) were a Coeur d'Alene institution and wanted them to stay there as long as possible," Williams said. "But we couldn't spend the amount of money it would take to bring that place up to fire code."

When Mrs. Canbury saw her chapel the day after the block was razed, it was tilted on its side, she said.

"I don't know how they thought I could keep marrying there with no water and at that angle," she said.

But no matter, she says.

Mrs. Canbury is content with her memories of the chapel that served as an office for several justices of the peace before she rented it in the 1950s.

Her pink-tinted cheeks tilted with a smile as she related her early days in the chapel.

New to the United States after World War II, and ordained as a minister of the Church of Ireland, she saw Coeur d'Alene as "a little bit of Ireland, with the lake and the green mountains all around."

With her husband, Teddy, she bought the Garden Avenue property complete with backyard chapel and opened the local Church of Ireland.

A trip past a line of brides and grooms outside the Kootenai County Courthouse one day raised numerous philosophical questions in her mind.

"I asked my friend why those children were there, and she said they couldn't afford to marry in a church," she said. "I thought, what kind of a heathen land is this that doesn't provide a proper church for its children to marry in?"

She says she asked God the same question that afternoon, and he told her to do something about the problem.

She leased the compact lake cottage on Wallace and Government Way.

"I wanted a wedding chapel where people could have nice weddings for little or no money. Making them join your church or make huge payments that's no way for God's children to act," she said with an indignant shake of her curls.

Many of her first bridegrooms were in the armed services, as she had been for the British government in two world wars.

"I was just out of the service myself—These boys were going overseas. They wanted someone to mother them," Mrs. Canbury remembered.

Word of her mothering prowess reached beyond nearby weddings to a boy who traveled from Pennsylvania hoping she would act as his mother.

As the memories flooded into her mind, she laughed and said, "Oh, the weird things that have happened there."

Like the time a few years ago when an irate bridegroom tried to kill her.

"They were drunk when they arrived, and I would not let them in God's house in that condition," she recalled.

As she remembers, the man grabbed her by the throat and pushed her against the wall, demanding she perform the ceremony. She continued to refuse.

Her life was saved, she said, by a man whom she had married earlier in the day.

"He said he was eating at a nearby restaurant with his new wife and a voice said, 'The little lady needs you,' and he came running," she said.

Then there was the 18-year-old bride and the 78-year-old groom who tightly held his hands over the arm.

"She was pasty white," Mrs. Canbury said. "I asked the man his vows and he said 'All right, get on with it.'"

To the girl she said, "Sweetheart, you don't want to be married to him, do you?"

The girl cried "No," and, threatening to call the sheriff—Mrs. Canbury sent the groom and the girl's parents out the door.

Her eyes snap in amused consternation and she said, "Oh, I don't know how the Lord has patience with us."

But her memory collecting is not over. Although a nearly crippling bout of arthritis caused her to stop her Sunday church services two years ago, she says she will perform weddings, even without the Coeur d'Amour.

"All I ask is for the Lord to keep me young and never let me be a beggar," she said, her black Church of Ireland robe smoothing around her as she struggled to her feet.

"As long as he wants me to be here, I'll keep going."

As his fame spread, he was invited to recite his works in the United States, a country he seemed to both hate and love — "this devastating, insane, demonically loud, roaring continent."

In May 1953, he informs Caitlin from Cambridge, Mass., on his fourth U.S. tour, that he is to write an opera with Igor Stravinsky. "In advance, I'll be given 500 pounds and our passage, first-class, and then another 500 pounds — and then royalties until we die. There'll be plenty of money. This time it's working."

The opera was never written. He died the following November in a New York hospital of alcohol-induced brain damage. He was 39.

This peregrine falcon is one of just over 100 such birds specialists in Boise are using to replenish the species

Man's meddling may aid peregrine falcons in struggle

By MARILYN HAUKE ESSEX
The Associated Press

BOISE — The majestic peregrine falcon likely will reign again over its natural North American habitat because man is manipulating the bird's sex and family life to replenish the species he almost destroyed.

On a remote hill that overlooks Idaho's capital city is the World Center for Birds of Prey — a baby factory for peregrine falcons where researchers must know the birds' body clocks better than they know their own.

The center marked its first anniversary in Idaho last, a year after the Rocky Mountain Peregrine Recovery Program was moved here from Fort Collins, Colo. In that first year, the center boosted the release of 150 peregrine falcons into five states.

From March through July — the peregrine's mating season — raptors housed in the Peregrine Fund's center don't have a lot of privacy. Their every daytime move is watched — particularly those moves that lead to fertile eggs.

The female gets to keep her eggs only seven days before attendants whisk away the precious cargo to an incubation room. Losing the eggs stimulates the female peregrine's hormones to prepare her for another round of egg laying.

The routine culminates years of research aimed at correcting a mistake in which man inadvertently altered nature. Programs aimed at replenshing other endangered species, such as the California condor and bald eagle, are patterned after research done by the Peregrine Fund.

The Peregrine Fund Inc., founded in 1970 by Tom Cade, operates the peregrine program's Idaho operation. The Boise-based organization also has a breeding center in Santa Cruz, Calif. The Peregrine Fund's breeding operation at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., was moved to Idaho earlier this month.

Man handed the peregrine falcon a death sentence 40 years ago with the introduction of the pesticide DDT. In June 1972, the Environmental Protection Agency banned all use of the chemical.

When DDT was introduced for widespread uses, the effects of the chemical in the food chain weren't fully considered. Peregrines prey on small birds, which in turn ingest insects killed by the powerful chemical. DDT ended up in the systems of peregrines, where it caused drastic thinning of egg shells because it prevents the birds from utilizing calcium.

Peregrines' nests — called eyries — generally are located in rocky, mountainous regions where thin-shelled eggs break easily, said Bill Tell, a volunteer at the center.

In the late 1940s, ornithologists knew the whereabouts of 400 peregrine nests east of the Mississippi River. By the mid-1960s, all had disappeared.

Since 1974, the Peregrine Fund has released about 1,700 birds into the wild.

Letters verify Dylan Thomas' penniless image

LONDON — Six months before he died, poet Dylan Thomas wrote to his wife from the United States that, at last, "there'll be plenty of money."

Poverty, it appears from Thomas' letters, plagued the life of the man revered as one of the greatest poets of the century, author of such enduring works as "Do Not Go Gentle into that Good Night," "Under Milk Wood" and "In My Craft and Sullen Art."

The misery of poverty appears repeatedly through Dylan Thomas' Collected Letters, edited by the biographer, Paul Ferris, and being published in Britain by J.M. Dent on Oct. 31. Extracts are being serialized in The Observer, a London Sunday newspaper.

Even after publishing some of what are now regarded as his best poems, he writes of what he calls "this chronic, hellish lack of money."

To the Royal Literary Fund, Thomas pleads in 1938: "I am 23 years old, and married. I have been trying to live by writing for five years, and have lived in poverty nearly all that time. So far, I have had to content with poverty."

The answer, despite glowing testimonials from fellow writers, is no.

"I think of it, of possessing it in great milk-wads in spinning and in clothes and sex and promiscuity and records and white wine and doctors and white wine again and a very vague young Irish woman whom I love in a grand, real way but will money to lose because of money money money money," he wrote Desmond Hawkins, a literary journalist.

Whether any of these letters elicited help is not revealed in the Observer extracts. Many of Thomas' friends believed that any money they gave him would be spent at pubs.

The doctors he mentions are those treating his chronic lung ailment. The young Irish woman is Caitlin MacNamara. He marries her in 1937, writing to his parents: "Neither of us, of course, has a penny apart from the three pounds which we have carefully hidden in order to pay for the (marriage) license."

When World War II breaks out, Thomas worries about what he will do — "declare myself a neutral state, or join as a small tank" — and winds up writing scripts for propaganda films.

He is impoverished again in 1949: "I've been sending out a will, any moment, stop sending milk; essential things in a baby-packed, freezing house. I'm summoned for rates (taxes). No more meat. I can't write a check of course, so that we are — for the first time for years — literally without any shilling."

Several of the letters published in The Observer are to Caitlin, overpowering in their passion, desperately afraid that she will leave him because of his extramarital affairs.

There are also hilarious letters, like that to novelist Pamela Hansford Johnson describing a savagely spicy Indian curry served at a dinner party.

"The first course was beans, little ones. I ate two and couldn't speak. A little man called Wallace B. Nichols, who has made a small fortune out of writing epic poems on people like Cromwell and Nelson and Mrs. Elsie Giddy, took a whole mouthful and was assisted out."

A woman, Mrs. Henderson, looked down on her plate and saw, lying in one corner of it, a curious, rubbery thing ... In interest, she picked it up and found it was the entire skin from her tongue."

As his fame spread, he was invited to recite his works in the United States, a country he seemed to both hate and love — "this devastating, insane, demonically loud, roaring continent."

In May 1953, he informs Caitlin from Cambridge, Mass., on his fourth U.S. tour, that he is to write an opera with Igor Stravinsky. "In advance, I'll be given 500 pounds and our passage, first-class, and then another 500 pounds — and then royalties until we die. There'll be plenty of money. This time it's working."

The opera was never written. He died the following November in a New York hospital of alcohol-induced brain damage. He was 39.
